Postpone Air Mail Law, Fix Policy, Plea Of Roosevelt

Permanent Legislation Would Wait on New Board's Action.

One-Year Mail Bids Are Recommended

Commission, to Report Next Congress, Asked to Secure Data.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Postponement of permanent aviation legislation, including air mail, until a special commission to be named by Congress can develop "a broad policy relating to aviation as a whole," was recommended late yesterday by President Roosevelt.

This solution to one of the most troublesome problems remaining before Congress came at the end of a conference with Senator Hugo L. Black, chairman of the Air-Mail Investigating Committee; Senator Kenneth McKellar, chairman of the Senate Postoffice Committee, and Representative James M. Mead, chairman of the corresponding House group.

Recognizing confusion which had grown about the controversial aviation situation, the President, in a White House statement, suggested that Congress, "in view of the lack of and the need for a National policy," appoint a commission to recommend action in the next Congress "covering all phases of aviation and the relationship of Government thereto."

Open Bids Friday.

Until a permanent policy can be developed, he proposed that air-mail contracts "could well be let on competitive bidding for one year or longer," presumably either under procedure already adopted by the Postoffice Department or by amending the present Administration bill in Congress. Bids on the first such temporary contracts, involving 21 routes, are to be opened Friday.

Although at first the White House statement was taken to mean the President had recommended all pending aviation legislation shelved for the duration of this session, the Congressional conferees disclosed they intended to amend the present measures in line with Mr. Roosevelt's suggestions. This would provide for reduction of the period for contracts from three years to one, and the appointment of a commission of experts.

This announcement came on the eve of the Senate Air-Mail Committee meeting to resume its investigation and, incidentally, to decide whether to inquire into the secret

Bill Puts Price On Bandit Head

Patman Proposes $25,000 for Chief Desperadoes, "Dead or Alive."

A bill authorizing the Federal Government to pay $25,000 reward for capture, dead or alive, of the Nation's chief desperadoes was introduced yesterday by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas.

The measure would leave to the Attorney General the right to name those criminals he considers to be public enemies and for whose apprehension the reward would be paid.

Department of Justice employes are exempt from the reward.

The Patman measure is directed against criminals such as John ("Wooden Pistol") Dillinger, "Pretty Boy" Floyd and other desperadoes who have been roaming the countryside taking a heavy toll of life.

The bill is expected to go to the Judiciary Committee which is considering seven antiracketeering and crime measures passed by the Senate. Although President Roosevelt did not include the crime bills in the legislative program which he deemed essential that Congress dispose of before adjournment, it was felt that some action would be taken on the measures by the House soon.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 16 (Spl.).—Robert Dessez, 20, formerly of Washington, was indicted on charges of involuntary manslaughter and drunken driving today by a Rockingham Circuit Court grand jury in connection with the death of his brother-in-law, Howard Custer, 24, in Brooks Gap ten days ago.

Custer was killed when the automobile, allegedly driven by Dessez, overturned.

Curry Ouster From Wigwam Is Likely Today

JOHN F. CURRY.

New York, April 16 (AP).—The rapid-spreading rebellion in the ranks against Silent John Curry, chief of the Tammany Hall wigwam, may force his ouster tomorrow.

Foes of the political boss—whose power, like that of Tammany itself, waned fast with the ascendancy of the Roosevelt forces in New York Democracy—planned tonight to serve William P. Kenneally, chairman of the Tammany executive committee, with a petition of more than half the Hall's members demanding an immediate meeting.

Kenneally, if so served, would have no choice but to assent.

The anti-Curry workers in Tammany expect to have the petition in shape tomorrow. If a meeting

Apology Given Wirt for "Jail In War" Charge

Bulwinkle "Sorry;" Probe Today to Hear Six Named in Quiz.

As six witnesses prepared to testify today in the Wirt investigation, two public apologies were voiced in the House yesterday.

Representative Alfred L. Bulwinkle (Democrat), North Carolina, apologized for declaring that Dr. William A. Wirt, Gary, Ind., educator, had been jailed for pro-German activities during the war.

Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, apologized for saying that Representative Harold McGugin (Republican) Kansas, had succeeded in having his remarks concerning the Wirt case extended in the Record without the permission of the House.

The witnesses will appear before a House investigating committee. They are expected to deny that at a dinner in Virginia last September they discussed a plot to overthrow the American social order. Wirt testified before the committee last Tuesday that there had been such a discussion. The hearing today will be broadcast.

The six persons, three men and three women, were guests at the dinner. All six already have stated that there was no discussion of any plot to overthrow present institutions and that Wirt, not they, did nearly all the talking.

Wirt Will Attend.

Wirt said he would be present as a spectator. He is not expected to be called again as a witness. James A. Reed, former Senator from Missouri, also will be present. He will make another attempt to appear as counsel for Wirt, but he is expected again to be told by majority committee members that he can not appear in that capacity.

Whether any more than the six witnesses will be called will be determined after their testimony is heard. Democratic members of the committee are expected to insist on conclusion of the investigation with

Two Convicts Shot as Five Break Prison

Bloodhounds Trail Pair Who Eluded Guns in Colorado.

Canon City, Colo., April 16 (AP).—Two convicts were shot today as they joined three others in a desperate bid for freedom from Colorado Penitentiary.

The felons overpowered an overseer, Joe Mosche, jr., 40, who was unarmed, and used him as a shield. Two escaped. One surrendered. Marvin Green and Roy McVey were shot in the body, McVey critically.

McVey, despite his wounds, stabbed Chet Yoe, a prison guard, in the neck with a knife made from a piece or iron as Yoe and other guards started to put McVey back inside the prison walls. The overseer later was released.

William Crosby surrendered to guards chasing the fugitives. Raymond Perry and Claude Reeves continued their flight, and bloodhounds were put on their trail. The pair attempted to take the auto of A. J. Turner, president of the First National Bank, which was parked on a street near the prison, but found it locked.

The five prisoners had been building a wall at one end of the prison yard.

All five who made the break were under 25 years of age.

Reeves was serving a 13 to 14 year sentence for assault with intent to rob. The others were sentenced from Denver on robbery charges.

10 Die as Peasants Battle Italian Police

30 Wounded in Polls Fight on Island of Rhodes.

Athens, April 16 (AP).—A serious outbreak in the Island of Rhodes in which 10 peasants were killed and 30 wounded in fighting with Italian police was reported in dispatches today.

The reports said the gendarmerie interfered in a local election Saturday in the mountain village of Salahos; that there was a long fight, and that after heavy casualties many peasants fled to the mountains. Hundreds of arrests were ordered.

The Dodecanesian Islands, of which Rhodes is the best known, have been under Italian sovereignty since the World War, and many natives of Grecian descent have emigrated to Greece.

Train Kills Doctor; Relative at Throttle

Cameron, W. Va., April 16 (AP).—Speeding home from his office, after learning his sick wife had suffered a relapse, Dr. James E. Cooper, 55, was struck by a pasenger train and killed last night.

The engineer on the Baltimore & Ohio train was Henry Malone, of McMechen, a brother of Dr. Cooper's first wife. The first Mrs. Cooper died several years ago.

Friends said the physician, driving a small car, apparently was concerned over his wife's condition and failed to take precautions at the railroad crossing.

Nearly Blind, He Rescues Sightless Pal, Dies by Auto

Huntington, W. Va., April 16 (Spl.).—A manslaughter warrant was issued today against H. A. Hawes, of Huntington, pending investigation of an automobile accident yesterday in which a nearly-blind man was killed rescuing a blind friend.

Aaron O. Howard, of Huntington, was killed by Hawes' car after he had pushed his friend, Louis Petrie, whom he was leading, out of danger.

Virginia Justice Rivals Jersey's; Trio Sentenced Within Six Days

Arrested, indicted, and sentenced within six days, three Washington robbers were given total terms of 70 years yesterday in Arlington County Circuit Court.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy handed down sentences of 30 years each to John Williams and George Garrison, who pleaded guilty to six indictments charging housebreaking, and 10 years to their companion, Grafton English, who pleaded guilty to two indictments.

Judge McCarthy said: "In view of the fact you have pleaded guilty, you are entitled to the leniency of the court, but I grant it with reluctance."

The sentence on each count was five years, not to run concurrently. The trio still face four counts in Fairfax County to which police said they have confessed; one in Warren County, another in Alexandria, and several more in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties, Md.

Since their arrest, Sheriff Howard B. Fields has reduced the double force on 24-hour shifts he maintained during the six weeks they were at large.

Sheriff Eppa Kirby arrested the trio last Tuesday.

Janet Snowden Seeks Divorce From Prince

PRINCESS SIRIGGNANO.

El Paso, Tex., April 16 (AP).—The former Janet Snowden," 19, heiress to an oil investment fortune, turned to Mexico divorce courts today in a second attempt to rid herself of her titled husband.

Court attaches at Juarez said suit had been filed by Janet Di Siriggnano asking divorce from "Principa F. Caravita Siriggnano."

An attorney here, Jeniroc Ceniceros, reported he acted in behalf of a New York attorney in filing the action, which, he said was based on allegations o. incompatibility.

Five days later, she announced she was seeking an annulment, describing the Italian nobleman as "a nice fellow," but adding that she married out of spite and that she loved another man. The annulment was denied.

An older sister of Janet is married to the Prince Rospiglioso, also an Italian nobleman.

Game Here Off, Nats in Boston To Open Today

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor, The Post).

Boston-bound with the Nats, April 15.—Held hitless, runless and gameless by the moist delivery of Old Man Weather in Washington today, the Nats fared forth tonight to Boston, where they make their American League bow tomorrow before a hostile populace aroused to dreams of former glories by a remodeled Red Sox Club fitted with some of baseball's most expensive appointments.

It will be a comedown, too, for the Nats in the social scale. Today they were to disport themselves before the presence of President Roosevelt, but tomorrow the officiating party at the inaugural ceremonies will be a mere State Governor—Gov. Ely of Massachusetts.

Sun Comes Out.

With a tear in his eye, owner Clark Griffith of the Nats surveyed the weeping skies from his Griffith Stadium office and called off the opening game at 12:35 today, only to rue his act within a half hour when the sun peeped through melting clouds and beamed its magnificence all over the premises to give the recipe for a perfect baseball day.

Griffith was moved to cancel the game by his desire not to subject the President to uncertain weather

Merchants Hit Ban on Parking

Protest on Seventh, F and G Regulation Set Today.

Washington's three major trade bodies will protest today directly to the District Commissioners against the recent ban on parking during business hours on Seventh, F and G streets in the downtown area.

Representatives of the traffic committees of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, Board of Trade and the Merchants and Manufacturers Association will voice their objections to the plan at 11 a. m.

The no-parking rule for these streets was the idea of William A. VanDuzer, director of traffic. It was put into effect over the protests of the trade groups, and now they are going to the Commissioners to voice their opposition to its operation.

Several merchants already have declared that the ban will hurt their business directly, and also indirectly in that it will have the effect of decentralizing the present downtown business sector.

Securities Act Revisions Up To Roosevelt

Mine Bloc Is Baffled in Moves to Discover Scope of Changes.

Business Groups Push Landis and Rayburn Into Agreement.

Minor modifying amendments to the securities act of 1933, worked out by Federal Trade Commissioner James M. Landis and Chairman Sam Rayburn, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, last night awaited President Roosevelt's final approval.

All efforts of the House gold and silver bloc, seeking liberalization of the act, to discover the scope of the amendments, proved futile. Demands were drafted by the bloc calling for substantial moderation not only of the act itself, but of administration regulations.

Agreement between Landis and Rayburn on minor concessions, following pressure from business interests for general modification, was announced by Rayburn on leaving a meeting of his committee. He declined to say what the amendments provided.

Roosevelt Gets Changes.

Commissioner Landis and other members of the Federal Trade Commission collaborated in preparing "such amendments as we believe were necessary," Rayburn said.

"These suggestions are now on the President's desk," he added.

Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher, of the Senate Banking Committee, said he had received no information as to the proposed amendments, but believed there were "one or two places where the act could be modified."

"I think dealers in securities should be held liable only for that part of an issue in which they are interested," he said. "The present liability provision go too far in this respect. And I think the bill might be further improved if the cost of suits and attorney fees were assessed against the plaintiff."

Exchange Seeks Changes.

Meantime, representatives of Western stock exchanges, meeting in Salt Lake City yesterday to organize the Association of Western Stock Exchanges, immediately went on record in favor of liberalizing the National securities act, according to Associated Press dispatches.

Los Angeles, Seattle, Denver, San Francisco, Spokane and Salt Lake City stock and mining exchanges were represented. A resolution was adopted declaring the securities act injurious to small prospecting companies. Another resolution opposed enactment of the Fletcher-Rayburn stock market control bill as threatening to close down producing mines and throw men out of work.

Earlier, members of the House mine bloc met yesterday to draft specific amendments to the securities act, easing drastic penal provisions and permitting mine stocks to be issued at less than $100 par value a share.

Scrugham Rushes Move.

Representative James G. Scrugham (Democrat), Nevada, mine bloc leader, said the proposed amendments will be offered to Commissioner Landis. He said he

Gallaudet Girl, Deaf, Vanishes; Wide Search On

A young woman, deaf since birth and unable to control her speech, was sought throughout the city and surrounding States last night as circulars and radio broadcasts described her disappearance from the grounds of Gallaudet College.

Leah Adams, 24, missing since last Wednesday, left the college to visit an oculist. She failed to return. Her parents in Decatur, Ill., were told of the disappearance, and after three days reported they had received no word of her whereabouts.

Miss Adams is described as 5 feet 5 inches tall, with hazel eyes and rosy cheeks. She is nearsighted and wears thick, horn-rimmed glasses. When last seen, she wore an orange-colored "swagger suit," striped blouse, black shoes and carried black gloves and purse.

Monoxide Gas Blamed In Newlyweds' Death

Fairmont, W. Va., April 16 (Spl.).—Marion County authorities have decided that carbon monoxide poisoning from a gas stove caused the deaths of Joseph Melvin Beavan, 21, and his 16-year-old bride of a month, whose bodies were found in the bedroom of their home at Ida May, near here.

Apparently the couple had been dead two days. The coroner found the doors and windows tightly sealed and a gas stove without ventilating pipe turned on full force. The sealing of the doors and windows was for protection against cold, it was believed.

Silver Forces Renew Fight, Defy Roosevelt Edict Against Bill

Congress Tightens Bill To Rule Stock Market

(Associated Press.)

The pendulum of Congressional sentiment on control of the stock exchanges—which has swung back and forth between strict and moderate regulation in recent months—yesterday moved definitely in the former direction following a week-end of White House conferences.

The Senate Banking sub-committee, to which revision of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill was entrusted, acted to make the margin provisions a bit tighter, and let it be known considerable strength would be added to the provisions covering the activities of specialists.

A sub-committee of the House Commerce Committee, which like the Senate committee has nearly completed consideration, worked meanwhile toward a probably favorable vote on the section specifying ten years' imprisonment and $25,000 as maximum penalty for violations of the act.

Those who attended President Roosevelt's conference with Senate leaders on Saturday and House chieftains Sunday brought back word the President had made it plain he wanted a "strong" bill and wanted it enacted at this session.

How far this went toward influencing the committee's action yesterday was a matter of opinion, but there was an evident inclination in many quarters to believe that it had been felt. The pendulum in the last two weeks had swung toward moderate regulation.

During the Chief Executive's vacation cruise, the committees of both houses voted extensive changes into the bill, virtually all in the direction of the wishes of the New York Stock Exchange as expressed in extensive hearings. Committee members were quick to deny printed interpretations they had been influenced by Wall street.

The Senate sub-committee's action yesterday consisted of making the margin section apply to outstanding accounts, as to the date of the bill's effectiveness, on June 30, 1936, instead of allowing five years to lapse.

Thayer Admits He Wrote 11 Utility Letters

N. Y. Investigators Hear Senator's Statement Read in Record.

Albany, April 16 (U.P.).—New York State's utilities issue was enlivened today by the voluntary admission of a State senator that he wrote 11 letters, revealed by the Federal Trade Commission at Washington, purporting to link him with a utility company.

A statement containing the admission was read by Clayton R. Lusk, counsel for the senator, Warren T. Thayer, at a Senate Judiciary Committee investigation into Thayer's connections with the Associated Gas & Electric Co.

The committee adjourned its hearing until May 7. It will report to the Senate, which will determine the Chateaugay Republican's fate. One of the letters supposedly written by Thayer to the Associated Gas expressed hope that killing of certain bills in 1927, "detrimental" to utilities, had been "satisfactory." Other letters were addressed to the J. C. White Management Corporation, a subsidiary.

Announcement of the letters several weeks ago created a furore that helped jam through the Senate Gov. Lehman's 12-point utility reform program and demands by the Governor for an investigation of the political activities of utility companies.

Shortly after opening of the inquiry, Lusk was given permission to read Thayer's statement into the records.

"I have examined my files and have found no copies," it read, "and I have no personal recollection of them. However, it is my opinion that the letters as published are substantially correct and I consent that they be treated as such."

The statement referred to several of the missives. Subsequently, Thayer, through his counsel, conceded that all 11 letters were substantially correct copies of letters he wrote.

Defense Army Needed, Dern Tells D. A. R.

H. L. Roosevelt Declares Strong Navy Vital as Sessions Open.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

Pleading that a defensive army and navy are not militaristic, Secretary of War George Dern and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt last night officially opened the forty-sixth Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution at Constitution Hall.

Dern pleaded for international cooperation and declared isolation a dangerous policy as regards world peace.

The gathering closed the first day of the annual congress. A brilliant picture was presented in the auditorium, crowded with 4,000 delegates and members. On the platform were D. A. R. officials and distinguished guests, while the boxes were lined with Federal officials, diplomats and prominent Washington residents.

At the morning session, Mrs. Russell William Magna, president general, reaffirmed her policy of keeping the D. A. R. out of partisan politics and of maintaining its tradition of nonaffiliation with other organizations.

Faith in Democracy.

At the afternoon session, Mrs. George Thacher Guernsey, honorary president general, refuted the claims of those who assert that democracy is a failure in this country. "The Daughters of the American Revolution still believe in democracy," she said.

The United States went into the World War with fervor and enthusiasm because it believed it to be a war to end war, Secretary Dern declared.

"Our boys felt that such a sublime cause was worth dying for," he continued, "and they went to their death with smiles on their lips believing that their sacrifice had helped to abolish war. No human being ever received the

Man Sends Wife, Baby to Safety, Dies Saving Home as Wire Falls

Sending his wife and child to safety, Edward James Goodwin, 26, East Columbia Park, Md., early yesterday died in an attempt to save his home from a fallen electric wire charged with 33,000 volts from a nearby trolley line.

Goodwin, a truck driver, was preparing to leave for work when fire and smoke began to issue from the radio, light sockets, and other electrical apparatus.

Looking through the window, he saw his house current "lead in" wire lying across those of the Washington, Baltimore, & Annapolis Railroad. An elaborate pyrotechnic display was in progress.

Calling to his wife, Mrs. Virginia Goodwin, and their 4-year-old child to run for their lives, he dashed to the basement to pull the electric switch.

Hearing a moan, Mrs. Goodwin told police, she ran back to the cellar to find her husband prone on the floor. The Bladensburg Rescue Squad was called and worked on him more than an hour. He was pronounced dead by Drs. Oscar Lavine and M. J. Keane.

A neighbor, James L. Van Horn, whose home was the only other on the circuit, was knocked down as he attempted to pull the switch in his cellar. It is believed that the wooden floor saved his life. The Goodwin basement floor is cement.

Various opinions were given as to what caused the wire to fall. Members of the rescue squad said a short circuit set the wooden pole on fire. Others expressed the opinion that high winds might have blown the wire down.

A coroner's jury, impaneled on the scene by Acting Coroner Harry O'Neill, of Bladensburg, came to the conclusion that Goodwin "came to his death by an electric shock caused by pulling a switch to prevent a fire threatened by a service line falling on the southbound trolley line of the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad."

Senate Proponents Will Renew Their Battle Before Roosevelt.

'Huge Gold Profits' Probe Demanded

By Robert C. Albright.

Resentment of Administration efforts to shelve silver legislation yesterday developed on both sides of the Capitol, as House and Senate silverites refused to accept the White House edict as final.

Senate proponents of silver monetization decided to carry the issue again to the President, while a House committee of 100 advocates of the white metal looked to Speaker Rainey for leadership.

"It all depends on what the Senate does with the Dies bill," said the Speaker. "If they pass that bill as amended by the Senate Agriculture Committee, then it is going through this session."

Silver markets sold off 95 to 124 points on word the President had ordered thumbs down on silver legislation, and pricking of the inflationary bubble extended the weakness to commodity markets, stocks and bonds. Stocks declined 1 to 4 points, with mining securities leading the downward movement. Wheat dropped 4⅜ to 4¾ a bushel.

Treasury Stirs Anger.

Antagonism against Treasury moves to check silver sentiment welled to the surface in a House resolution introduced by Representative Compton White (Democrat), of Idaho, to investigate both "gold bloc" profits and silver holdings.

"It is very apparent to me that the 'gold bloc' has made huge profits out of gold revaluation," he said. "They are trying to muddy the water by saying somebody is going to make money out of silver speculation."

Developments followed rapidly after Speaker Rainey's announcement that "silver is not on the Administration's legislative program."

"The President is just as strong for silver as I am," said the Speaker. "But he thinks it would be more advantageous to work out the plan adopted by the London Economic Conference."

Outlines Proposals.

He said the first move would be to persuade the six major silver producing countries to utilize all newly-mined silver for currency purposes, and next, to get other nations which approved the London pact to give silver a more favored status in their currency systems.

"The President feels that if this is

N. Dakota Aid Chiefs Indicted

Gov. Langer, Eight Others Are Charged With Conspiracy.

Fargo, N. Dak., April 16 (AP).—Nine persons, including Gov. William A. Langer, were named in indictments returned late today by a Federal grand jury investigating charges the Government relief workers were forced to contribute to political funds.

Gov. Langer was removed as head of Federal relief activities in North Dakota several weeks ago after Washington officials asserted preliminary investigation had revealed relief workers were forced to contribute to the support of the Leader, administration newspaper.

Terming the charges politically inspired, Langer denied them at the time and said he would welcome an investigation

Others named in the indictments, which charge conspiracy to violate Federal statutes, are Oscar Chaput, business manager of the Leader; State Senator Oscar Erickson, listed as publisher of the paper; State Highway Commissioner Frank A. Vogel; Harold McDonald, solicitor for the paper; R. A. Kinzer, Joseph Kinzer, Paul J. Yater and G. A. Hample.

Bishop Cannon Slated to Take Stand Today

U. S. Climaxes Case With Evidence of "Wash" Check Deals.

By Frank Getty.

Bishop James Cannon, jr., apparently as vigorous, despite his 69 years, as when he "broke the South for Hoover" and helped defeat Alfred E. Smith in the campaign of 1928, may take the stand today in his own defense against the Government's charges of conspiracy to violate the Federal corrupt practices act.

Presenting details of an alleged "wash" transaction between the bishop and his codefendant, Miss Ada Burroughs, in which they exchanged checks totaling approximately $18,000 on the day they made a final report to Congress, the prosecution brought its case to a climax yesterday.

The Government will rest after further brief testimony this morning, and Robert H. McNeill, chief of the defense counsel, will move for a directed verdict of not guilty.

Should Justice Peyton Gordon overrule the motion, McNeill said yesterday, both Cannon and Miss Burroughs will take the stand, along with a dozen defense witnesses. The defense attorney said he had not decided definitely, "for tactical reasons" the order of appearance of the defendants.

Bank Accounts Checked.

Through testimony of E. J. Armbruster, Department of Justice agent who has been at work on the case since September, 1931, the Government revealed the bishop's bank balances during the anti-Smith campaign, checking them against accounts of the "headquarters committee, Anti-Smith Democrats" and against reports made by Miss Burroughs to the clerk of the House of Representatives.

The purport of the testimony was to show conspiracy between the defendants in not reporting to Congress all of the $65,300 contributed to the anti-Smith campaign by E. C. Jameson, president of the Globe & Rutgers Fire Insurance Co.

The climax of the Government's case came with the revelation that on February 11, 1929, just before they completed their final report, Bishop Cannon had a balance of $549.81 in one bank, and Miss Burroughs, for the "headquarters committee," had an overdraft of $81.62 in another.

They exchanged checks, Armbruster testified, for more than $18,000. It is the Government's contention that this alleged "wash" transaction enabled the defendants to account for the $17,300 of "Jameson money" reported to the House, and to camouflage repayment to the bishop under a series of items designated by Miss Burroughs as refunds.

Overdraft Vanishes.

One of the checks given by Cannon in the course of the day's transactions was for $17,300. When, however, the checks had been exchanged and deposited, the respective bank accounts were about where they had been at the opening of business, except that Miss Burroughs, for the "headquarters committee," had wiped out her small overdraft.

Armbruster also testified that Miss Burroughs received only $435.25 for her services during the six months she served the anti-Smith cause.

Preparing to present his case today, McNeill, who has been associated with the Cannon defense from the start, promised to show that every penny of the $48,000 received by the bishop from Jameson and not reported to Congress was spent for State campaign purposes in Virginia. Most of the defense witnesses will be those who helped spend it.

McNeill also promised a surprise on behalf of the defense, "something only hinted at" before the Nye investigating committee four years ago. He said he would not cross-examine Jameson, who has testified for the prosecution, but would call him this week as a defense witness.

The defense hopes the trial will end Friday.

Deputy Sheriff Shot to Death

Officer Slain by Another as He Mounts Steps to Courthouse.

Harlan, Ky., April 16 (AP).—Deputy Sheriff Bige Gross, 35, was shot and killed as he entered the Harlan County courthouse this afternoon, and Lee Fleenor, 28, another deputy, who said he fired as Gross reached for his hip pocket, tonight was in jail awaiting arraignment.

Gross was shot as he stood on the lower inside steps of the courthouse, just outside the office of the county judge. He was shot three times, one bullet striking his neck and two entering his right side.

Fleenor put his gun in his holster just before he was arrested by Sheriff T. R. Middleton. The sheriff said Gross was carrying a gun, but that when he examined the body the gun was still in its holster.

Gross was married and the father of four children. Indicted last month on a murder charge in connection with the slaying on March 4 of Clem, half-brother of Fleenor, Gross was under bond of $15,000 on the murder charge and under another $7,500 bond on charges of wounding Mrs. Clem.

Clem was killed during an attempted arrest. Fleenor was acquitted of a previous slaying in 1931.

Capital School Needs Go Begging As Money Pours Into Public Works

Another janitor's room converted into a classroom because of the inadequacy of school facilities here. This is a scene inside the Truesdale School.

Publicity of New Deal's "Richer Life" Aims Strikes Discord.

This is the last of a series of eight articles on Washington schools.

By Felix Bruner.

Relief of congestion in Washington schools apparently still is far in the future. Washington will continue to use old school buildings, some of them as much as 70 years old. Classes will become larger, hallways and basements and other places not intended to be used as classrooms will continue as such. There will be no new playgrounds. The portables will continue in use.

This situation is indicated by the recent report of the House Committee on District Appropriations. The school appropriation, as recommended by the committee, is slightly above that for the current year, but far below that of most previous years. The total recommended by the committee is $9,469,106, as compared with a budget estimate of $9,504,106, and an appropriation of $8,540,713 for the current year. This compares with an appropriation of $13,892,390 in 1931, and $13,516,560 in 1932. The 1933 appropriation, even after the depression began to force economies, was $12,162,730.

Much of the reduction is in operating costs. More is in provision for additional facilities. The school building program is almost at a standstill. It will continue that way. There is no provision for the purchase of more land. The provision for new building construction totals $604,000. This compares with an estimate that it would require $3,000,000 a year for buildings and land to keep up with the increased enrollment in the schools.

2 More High Schools Needed.

The building provisions are for three purposes, $400,000 for completion of the Woodrow Wilson High School, $168,000 for construction of an addition to the Hugh M. Browne Junior High School for colored pupils, and $36,000 for a gymnasium at Powell Junior High School. That is all. It is estimated that already Washington needs two more senior high schools, and that by the time the Wilson school is finished, overcrowding will be considerably greater than it is now.

There is no provision for replacement of Jefferson Junor High School. This is one of the most inadequate. It is situated near a railroad and is overcrowded. A site has been partially purchased and money has been appropriated for beginning work on a building. There the matter stands and presumably will continue to stand.

The addition to be built at the Browne School will relieve congestion in some of the elementary schools. This school, opened in 1932, never has been able to accommodate ninth grade pupils. The school has a capacity of 650 pupils. If the ninth grade pupils who would have a right to expect to attend this school were included, the enrollment would exceed 900. Thus congestion in some of the elementary schools will be somewhat relieved by an addition to the Browne School.

Powell Has 1 Gymnasium.

The Powell School has one gymnasium for both boys and girls. The appropriation for a gymnasium will relieve this situation, but it will not relieve congestion in the school. It has an estimated capacity of 870 pupils and an enrollment of 1,054. It occupies six rooms of the Johnson elementary school building directly across the street. Three hundred twenty-eight pupils of the seventh and eighth grades who should be in Powell School are still attending the John Quincy Adams School.

* * * *

This series of artciles has attempted to point out in a general way the physical shortcomings of the public school system. It has made no attempt to go into the question of scholarship or school administration. Nor has it attempted to answer the question of whether there should be a change in the method of appointing the school board and other school officials.

Washington people primarily are interested in seeing that their children obtain all reasonable school advantages, that they are housed during school hours in healthful and reasonably comfortable surroundings, and that they are given adequate playground and other facilities.

That Washington schools have their shortcomings there is no question. They experience these difficulties in common with the school systems of other cities. A part of the difficulty is due to the fact that the school facilities in Washington, as elsewhere, has "just grown" rather than having been developed on a prearranged plan. If the system were to be started from the beginning today it probably would be different physically.

Has Many Small Buildings.

Recently the fact was brought up that Washington has a great many small school buildings that should be replaced with larger buildings, accomodating more pupils, so that individual teachers would have only one class or a part of a class to look after. The tendency both in the cities and in rural districts has been toward larger elementary schools, because these are more efficient and give the pupils more advantages. The day of the "little red school house" is gone. Nevertheless, the Washington school authorities must work with such physical facilities as are available to them. The small buildings can not immediately be replaced and they must be used to take care of the ever-growing school enrollments.

The strange thing about the situation in Washington, as elsewhere, is the fact that while the New Deal authorities are talking about new building construction, about subsistence homesteads, about slum eradication and about other contruction projects to employ labor and to develop what some of them term the "richer life," they have neglected almost entirely the wonderful opportunity presented to improve school facilities and to start the "richer life" with the children, where such a start would mean so much more than it possibly could to older persons.

What better place to develop a model program than in the Capital of the Nation?

questioning of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh by the Department of Justice. Indications are a majority of the committee will support Chairman Black in opposing the inquiry.

In proposing delay before enactment of permanent legislation affecting aviation, Mr. Roosevelt was said to believe that in the short period remaining before adjournment, Congress would not have sufficient opportunity for the adoption of a National policy. The White House statement, outlining his views, said:

"In conversation with Senators McKellar and Black and Congressman Mead, the President suggested that in connection with pending aviation legislation, it should be borne in mind that the United States has had no broad aviation policy; that a large number of inter-related factors enter into the general subjects of civilian and military flying and their subdivisions into material, personnel, manufacturing and experimentation.

Recommends Commission.

"That in view of the lack of and the need for a National policy, the Congress might well authorize the appointment of a commission to make immediate study and recommend to the next Congress a broad policy covering all phases of aviation and the relationship of Government thereto.

"Insofar as that part of aviation which relates to carrying the U. S. mails is concerned, contracts could well be let on competitive bidding for one year or until such time as a broad policy relating to aviation as a whole is adopted."

Although the White House statement removed the element of permanence from the present air-mail bill, it did little to relieve the controversy surrounding the issue.

Both the McKellar bill and conditions under which temporary contracts are to be awarded require that air-mail lines whose contracts were cancelled reorganize.

Hence whether either the Administration bill is adopted or the present Postoffice Department procedure is followed, it means the reshaping of the Nation's entire network of air transport.

Whatever hope former contractors still held for participating in awards without reorganization, dropping such officers as engaged in the so-called "spoils conference" in 1930, was driven to a new low.

Senator McKellar said he intended to bring up the air-mail bill today, while Chairman Mead said his committee would meet tomorrow, when it might report the bill. In both cases they planned to amend it to allow for termination of the contracts on development of a National aviation policy.

Aviation Unity Forecast.

Meanwhile, the proposal for an aviation study by a commission drew from Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, majority leader, the opinion that ultimately military and naval aviation will be unified, according to the Associated Press. Out of the study may grow new legislation, far reaching in character.

"There is no doubt that he wants legislation at this session," Mead said of the President, "although it may be superseded. For that reason the President wants the contracts elastic in character. The broad policy may be established in a year, although it might take longer."

The routes for which bids will be opened Friday cover approximately 80 per cent of the network formerly operated by lines whose contracts were abrogated. As temporary contracts are let, the Army Air Corps—now flying skeleton routes—will be relieved. The Postoffice Department so far has received no word whether any former contractors, reorganized or not, will enter bids, which are for 90 days.

While Congress considers setting up a new commission to study all aviation, the special committee headed by Newton D. Baker today will begin its investigation of operations of the Air Corps. It is composed of six civilians and six Army officers and will inquire into equipment, rules, flying instructions and personnel, with a view to making recommendations to improve efficiency.

Inquiry Resumes Today.

The Senate Airmail Investigating Committee will resume its investigating today with W. I. Denning, Washington lawyer, who formerly represented Braniff Airways of Oklahoma on the stand.

Since other Democrats on the committee agree with Senator Black that an inquiry into the questioning of Col. Lindbergh would be far afield, the Republicans demanding the investigation appear to have lost.

Guard Placed Over Trotzky; French Vexed

Exile, Fearing Assassins, Plans Flight; "Plotting" Brings Attack.

Barbizon, France, April 16 (U.P.).—Leon Trotzky, fearing White Russian assassins, was under heavy guard tonight at his villa hideaway here on the outskirts of Paris, where he has been living secretly for six months.

The dynamic exiled Soviet leader, confessing he was plotting a "fourth internationale," was understood to be preparing a secret departure. He feels his safety has been endangered as a result of the exposure of his whereabouts yesterday by the police.

His White Russian enemies, many of whom are living in Paris as exiles from the Soviet regime, have vowed to assassinate Trotzky on sight as vengeance for the sufferings of their families and executions of relatives at the hands of the Red police.

Must Report to Police.

Trotzky and his little household, including his wife, were reported to have slipped away in the night, but this evening a gendarme on duty said they were still inside the villa. The authorities pointed out that if Trotzky changed his residence he must notify the police, on penalty of expulsion. He promised to keep them informed, should he move, even if leaving France.

The Nationalist Conservative press is trying to make the case a national incident. The newspaper La Liberte, for example, demanded he be deported, printing great headlines saying, "Trotzky's presence in France is intolerable."

The cabinet is to consider Trotzky's case tomorrow. The police, on raiding the villa, found his papers in order, with a resident permit by former Premier Camille Chautemps.

An official inquiry may be started, however, to determine the extent of his alleged political plotting, contrary to his pledge given when allowed to reside in France.

Trotzky himself admitted to the police that he was spending his time organizing a "fourth internationale," and members of Parliament demanded that he at least be removed a considerable distance from Paris.

His "fourth internationale," the right-wing press declared, was designed to keep the world in constant and complete anarchial revolution. The police indicated, however, the plot was "still incubating," and that it was largely personal, with very few collaborators.

Reports persisted that influential members of the cabinet tomorrow would urge that Trotzky be invited to seek residence in Corsica. Pretenders to thrones and other foreign political personages of controversial importance, it was pointed out, are not regarded as desirable residents near the capital.

The anti-Trotzky cabinet members were said to be prepared to demand that if he refuses refuge in Corsica, he must be expelled from French territory.

Bill on Silver Pushed in Spite Of White House

done, action on present bills is unnecessary," the Speaker added.

But other members of the House silver bloc lost no time in stating they had other notions and believed the Speaker had. Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, who drafted the original House bill now awaiting action on the Senate calendar, predicted favorable action on his amended bill. Representative John A. Martin (Democrat), of Colorado, a leader of the House silver committee of 100, said silver legislation is imminent.

The Senate's special silver committee designated Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, to make further overtures to the President in an effort to have the Dies bill placed on the Administration's legislative calendar.

As passed by the House, the bill sanctioned foreign payments in silver for American agricultural surpluses, at a premium not in excess of 25 per cent of the world market price. As amended by the Senate Agriculture Committee, and now pending on the Senate calendar, the bill goes much further, providing for nationalization of silver stocks and Government purchase of the white metal until commodity prices reach 1926 levels.

The White resolution introduced in the House yesterday would set up a special committee of five members, appointed by the Speaker, to "investigate speculation and profits in the acquisition and movements of gold resulting from legislative or Executive action affecting the value of gold, and the acquisition and holdings of silver in anticipation of legislative or Executive action."

White said he wanted to compare speculative operations in the two metals.

Rainey Favors Inquiry.

Representative Dies, who planned to introduce a similar resolution, said he would support White's instead. Speaker Rainey, who last week called for an investigation of the "gold bloc," said he has not changed his mind since Sunday's White House conference.

"I still think they ought to be investigated," he said.

In the Senate, a new silver monetization plan was launched in the face of Administration opposition, as a substitute for the divergent proposals that have been largely incorporated in the Dies bill.

Senator James P. Pope (Democrat), Idaho, asked Treasury purchase of silver at the rate of 10,000,000 ounces a month until certificates issued against silver total the value of certificates having a gold basis.

At both ends of the Capitol, silver advocates freely predicted an early showdown between Administration efforts to maintain a free hand in monetary matters and Congressional sentiment for forcing currency expansion with silver as a new money base.

Capitol expanionists point out the President never has used the discretionary silver inflationary authority granted him under the Thomas amendment to the agracultural adjustment act.

Doctors Hear Of New Cure For Pneumonia

Patient Made Temporarily Worse by Producing Artificial Crisis.

Chicago, April 16 (AP).—A new treatment for pneumonia, which makes the disease temporarily "worse" and warning that many dangerous diseases are not cured when they seem to be, were presented today to the American College of Physicians.

The pneumonia treatment, used to cure lobar pneumonia, brings on an artificial "crisis" about two days ahead of schedule, when the patient is in better condition to meet it, said Dr. Simon S. Leopold, of Philadelphia. In experiments he cut the death rate from 72 per cent to 16 per cent.

The crisis is produced by injecting air into the lung. When compression is maintained in the lung for about 48 hours in this way, he explained, the progress of the disease is halted and recovery starts.

To make sure the treatment would benefit humans, Dr. Leopold tried it first on 36 dogs, infected with lobar pneumonia.

Of 18 dogs given the treatment, 15 recovered and 3 died. Of the other 18 not given injections only 5 recovered and 13 died.

This treatment already has been used successfully in Europe for lobar pneumonia, Dr. Leopold reported. It saved the lives of 47 out of 50 patients so treated, who ranged in age from 6 weeks to 62 years.

Many people, seemingly healthy, actually are running great risk of serious illness because they are infected with continuous though unsuspected cases of the common cold, bronchopneumonia, bronchitis focal infections of teeth or tonsils, rheumatic fever or tuberculosis, Dr. Allen K. Krause reported in a paper on "The Permanent Nature of Various Common Infections."

H. L. Roosevelt Declares Strong Navy Vital as Sessions Open.

adulation that the whole world accorded to Woodrow Wilson, the great apostle of a just and lasting peace."

Discusses Pacifists.

Secretary Dern made an ardent plea for the abolishment of the terms "pacifist and militarist." He claimed that there was only a handful of pacifists in the United States of the type opposed to war under any circumstances and hence opposed to any sort of military establishment, even for defensive purposes. On the other hand, he claimed, militarists who believe in wars as the only proper means for settling quarrels between nations are even scarcer.

Dern declared that the Army and Navy never caused any of our wars but they stopped every one of them.

"The people bring about wars," he said. Peace advocates are idealists and soldiers are realists in the Secretary's opinion. He advocated a revision of the rules of war.

"War used to be waged between opposing armies," he said, "but in our so-called enlightened times the civil population, including women and children, are also subject to attack. One of our generals said to me the other day that if airplanes and submarines could be eliminated and all fighting done on the surface of the land and the water, it would be a long step forward."

Holds U. S. Seeks Peace.

"Surely we want the United States loved and honored throughout the wide world," he concluded, "and if, by reason of our justice and benevolence, we gain and hold the confidence, admiration and friendship of all the world there will be little danger of becoming embroiled in disputes and conflicts. And to be an American then will be an even prouder title than it has ever been before."

The mission of the American Navy, Assistant Secretary Roosevelt said in his address, is to support National policies.

He praised the Vinson-Trammell bill, authorizing the building up of the American Navy to treaty strength, and pointed out that the naval airplane has become an integral part of the fleet as guns and torpedoes.

He quoted the late Read Admiral William A. Moffett, lost at sea last April in the wreck of the Naval dirigible Akron, as saying in the dirigible Akron, as saying "A second-best navy is worth no more than a second-best poker hand when it is called."

"An inadquate navy is just as useless as no navy at all," he declared. "The really practical pacifists are the Army and Navy officers of this country. They know what war means and are willing to take every honorable step to prevent it.

Treaties Win Praise.

"Splendid work has been done by conferences of nations that have drawn up international treaties now restricting naval strength. They have prevented costly races for naval supremacy, and have at the same time affirmed the right of adequate defensive forces to the signatory powers."

A program of music by the United States Marine Band Orchestra under the direction of Capt. Taylor Branson, with singing by Lou McIlvain, soprano of the Milan Lirico Opera Company, concluded the exercises. Invocation was offered by the Rev. Dr. ZeBarney Phillips, chaplain of the United States Senate and rector of the Church of the Epiphany.

Declaring her intention to keep the D. A. R. out of partisan and political movements and to maintain its traditional policy of nonaffiliation with other organizations of any nature, Mrs. Magna, in her annual address, threw down the gauntlet to those protesting her policy in withdrawing last winter from the Woman's Patriotic Conference for National Defense.

"The strength of our society lies in the fact that we are nonpartisan and nonpolitical," she said. "Any deviation from this position weakens our force, changes our character and is against the tenets of our procedure. Absolute adherence to them is at once the defense of our society as a National group and our protection from exploitation through entangling alliances.

"I firmly believe in adequate National preparedness on land, sea and air and the many ramifications of National security against crime, subversive forces, intrigue and exploitations. I admit to enthusiasm, but I avoid hysteria."

Mrs. Magna was even more enthusiastic about air defense, which she insisted should be "second to none."

It was freely admitted on all sides after Mrs. Magna's address that by bringing the controversial issues to the fore herself, any controversy on the floor about them is now improbable.

Youth Given Praise.

Urging that the D. A. R. attract young people and keep step with the march of events, Mrs. Magna expressed her belief in modern youth and said, "I believe in the youth of today as fine, sane and splendid as youth has ever been, as history relates down through the ages."

"Many nations," she continued, "with astute foresightedness are teaching youth the ideas they wish promoted. Should we do less? America must look to her coming generations if American ideas, ideals, fundamentals and our Constitutional form of Government are to remain intact."

"All the oratory and pigeon-hole resolutions lying dusty on forgotten shelves will never cure the existing ills. We must ally ourselves with our American youth and we can not hope to attract young women leaving school if we do not offer them a program which has in it hope and enthusiasm and a belief in the eternal truths. Wherever we have D. A. R. chapters of adults, there should be chapters of young men and women."

Mrs. Magna lamented too drastic economy in public school education, declaring education is America's main industry."

"For more than a decade," she said, "we, as a nation, have been slowly losng our hold on the safe moorings of law and order, the keystone of the national life of any country. It is the continued disregard of laws, made and provided for the safe conduct of civic life, that has created a habit of mind, which has made the kidnaper and racketeer possible."

Greeted by Commissioners.

The rest of the morning session was devoted to greetings from the District Commissioners, welcoming the D. A. R. delegates, to and from heads of patriotic organizations. The congress in unison recited the American's creed, led by William Tyler Page, its author.

A picturesque incident was the appearance of two pages from the Children of the American Revolution convention, also meeting in Washington, bearing a basket of flowers almost as large as themselves to present to Mrs. Magna on behalf of their organization. The pages were John Augustine Washington, whose grandfather was born at Mount Vernon and who can trace his own ancestry collaterally to George Washington, and Harriet Ann Cutts, a descendant of President James Madison.

Mrs. George Thacher Guernsey, of Independence, Kans., honorary president general, in the course of greeting the congress at the afternoon session refuted the claims of those who assert democracy is a failure in this country.

"The Daughters of the American Revolution," she insisted, "still believe in democracy. We are well aware that there are many of the 'brain trust' variety who aver that democracy is a failure. Socialistic or Communistic leaders would have us believe that democratic forms of government have proved failures. Russia, Italy, Germany are pointed to as proof of their claim. The people of Russia, with its 160,000,000 of illiterate and suppressed, may be unprepared for democracy. America, with its great masses composed of intelligent middle-class citizens, will never yield to the leadership of any one class, whether high or low. We Americans are ready to adopt any new measure which will heal our National ills, but we will not kill a sick man to avoid the dangers of his illness. Our society continues to believe that the disorders which threaten democracy can be removed without destroying the Nation. What ills we have inherited or created can be remedied."

in the bill to meet objections that the margin requirements otherwise would cause a sudden liquidation and deflation. However, he said, "everybody" agreed that five years was too long.

Fletcher forecast the committee would amend the section on specialists to prohibit anyone acting in that capacity from dealing for themselves in the stock they handle as such. At the hearings, spokesmen for the stock exchange argued at length and with emphasis against such a restriction.

Fear Liquidity to Be Hindered.

To prohibit a specialist from buying or selling the issue he handles for his own account would destroy the liquidity of the market, they asserted. In trading for himself, they said, the function of the specialist is to narrow the span between bid and asked prices.

Fletcher yesterday received a letter from Samuel Untermyer, long a critic of the exchange, urging that the specialist section be tightened. He argued that a specialist from the orders in his book had a knowledge of the market trend that operated too greatly to his own advantage. He is like a "card player with marked cards," Untermyer said.

Untermyer also brought up again the charge of propaganda and organized opposition to the bill which have been raised from time to time since the measure's introduction, including a pointed comment by President Roosevelt. The New York attorney asserted the bill has been too greatly liberalized under the force of "blighting and misleading propaganda."

One House member who attended the White House conference said Mr. Roosevelt wanted margins limited by figures definitely stated in the bill. This became a point of much controversy during the President's absence.

The Senate committee removed the bill's provision for a minimum 60 per cent cash margin and left the question to the discretion of a regulating commission. The House sub-committee changed the figure to 40 per cent, but made it only advisory, with the Federal Reserve Board empowered to change it as it might think best.

According to law, he is allowed 90 days from the time of the ruling of the State Court of Appeals, which denied his writ, to go before a higher court. The ruling was handed down on March 16 of this year.

Apology Given Wirt for "Jail In War" Charge

Bulwinkle "Sorry;" Probe Today to Hear Six Named in Quiz.

the testimony of the six. Republican members and Reed are expected to insist that other persons named by Wirt, including members of the "brain trust," be called.

Bulwinkle, chairman of the committee, said he would confine the questioning to what was said at the dinner party. The party was given at the home of Miss Alice Barrows of the office of education of the Interior Department. She will be one of the witnesses.

The others will be Miss Mary Taylor of the Agriculture Department; Miss Hildegarde Kneeland, head of the Home Economics Division of the Agriculture Department; Robert W. Bruere, chairman of the National industrial relations board of the cotton industry; Laurence Todd, Washington representative of Tass, the Soviet news agency, and David Cushman Coyle, architect and engineer with the Public Works Administration.

Bulwinkle Retracts Charge.

The first of the two House apologies was made by Chairman Bulwinkle following a demand from Reed that he make a public retraction.

Bulwinkle made his original statement last Wednesday in the course of a debate with McGugin. Later he inserted into the record of his speech the words "whether or not," indicating that he questioned whether Wirt was in jail.

The apology by O'Connor came as a result of an affair that wound up by being "all a misunderstanding," because a House stenographer had lost a page of the record showing that McGugin did get permission to extend his remarks about the Wirt investigation.

The part of the record contained on the page did not appear in the printed Record. But it is there now. The House put it there by unanimous consent yesterday.

"After a thorough investigation of the report, which came to me by what any one would consider reliable sources," Bulwinkle informed the House, "I am convinced that the report is not true; and, therefore, as a man and a member of this House, after ascertaining that the report was untrue and unfounded and in order that no injustice might be done to Dr. Wirt, it is my duty to correct such statement made by me on the floor of the House on April 11. And I therefore tender my apology to Dr. Wirt.

Not Prosecuting Dr. Wirt.

"I also make this statement here today for the purpose of showing that the committee was not prosecuting Dr. Wirt. I was simply investigating whether or not the statements made by Dr. Wirt, and read to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce by Mr. Rand, were true or not."

The "affair of the lost Record page" came after McGugin had tried filibuster tactics against consent calendar bills requiring unanimous consent for approval. Majority Leader Byrns objected to McGugin's tactics and O'Connor charged that the latter had succeeded in having remarks extended in the Record without consent.

O'Connor charged that McGugin had "wilfully and knowingly" violated the rules of the House.

"I never before heard of such a gross violation of the rules," he said.

As proof that the rules had been violated, he pointed to the fact that the Record said nothing about permission being granted McGugin to extend his remarks.

Speaker Rainey said he would investigate and report back.

Later he reported that page 200 of the typewritten copy for the Record had been misplaced and had not appeared in the Record. O'Connor defended himself by insisting he assumed the Record was official. Minority Floor Leader Snell said O'Connor should check up before he took too much for granted.

Diplomat Dies

EDWIN VERNON MORGAN, who for 20 years prior to the present Administration was Ambassador to Brazil, died yesterday in Petrololis, Brazilian summer capital.

E. V. Morgan, Former Envoy To Brazil, Dies

20 Years as Ambassador to Nation Set Mark for Diplomats.

Rio de Janeiro, April 16 (AP).—Edwin Vernon Morgan, 69, former United States Ambassador to Brazil, died suddenly today at his residence in Petrololis, Brazilian summer capital.

Morgan had served as Ambassador to Brazil for 20 years but resigned with the Roosevelt Administration. He loved Brazil and returned here February 20 to go into retirement. Death came within two months.

Mr. Morgan had served his country throughout the world. He had been American Consul at Dalny and Minister to Korea, Cuba, Paraguay, Uruguay and Portugal. His home town was Aurora, N. Y.

His 20 years as Ambassador to Brazil set a record for American diplomats.

Mr. Morgan was noted for his interest in Brazilian affairs and history. In 1915 he presented 600 volumes of Brazilian history and literature to the Widener Library at Harvard University.

In 1905 he was host to Miss Alice Roosevelt, now Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, in Seoul, Korea, when he was Minister there.

The following year he was Minister to Cuba and there he entertained Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, presenting her to President Palma. He served as mediator in the Cuban revolution of 1906 with William Howard Taft, later President.

Among famous American statesmen whom he entertained in Havana were "Uncle Joe" Cannon and William Jennings Bryan.

When he went to South America first he served as Minister to Paraguay and Uruguay. He was so popular that upon his transfer the university students of Paraguay demonstrated against his withdrawal.

He was appointed Ambassador to Brazil January 12, 1912. In the following year he entertained Theodore Roosevelt.

Mr. Morgan was apparently in good health last night and entertained a party of friends. He was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage at 1 a. m. today, shortly after the party ended.

He was greatly loved here and was known as "the most Brazilian of Americans." He was regarded as knowing more about Brazil than any foreigner.

Foshay, Aid Surrender To Federal Authorities

Both have been sentenced to 15 years in Leavenworth Prison for using the mails to defraud in connection with the promotion of Foshay enterprises.

Comedian Not Funny At Home, So Wife Sues

Los Angeles, April 16 (AP).—Mary Rubin filed suit for divorce today from Benny Rubin, musician and entertainer. She charged he was morose and sullen in her company.

Finally, after telling her he no longer cared for her and ordering her from their home, Mrs. Rubin complained, they separated. They had been married six years and have a daughter, Lila, 4.

Ouster of Curry Held Likely Today

Leader Since 1929.

Curry succeeded to Tammany leadership in the 1929 squabble following upon the resignation of the veteran George W. Olvany, a close friend of Alfred E. Smith. There was dissension in the Hall after Smith's defeat in the 1928 Presidential campaign, Curry won in the leadership fight over Smith's opposition. Former Mayor James J. Walker was an ally then and after of Curry.

The warwhoops against Curry—son of an immigrant Irish cattle driver who struggled step by step through Tammany ranks to power—were heard loudest today in the Eighth Assembly District, where a majority of precinct captains demanded the ouster of two Curry coleaders, Dr. Solomon Goldenkrans and Mrs. Frances Bauman.

The captains, too, joined in the petition against Curry's resignation.

One of the leaders in the revolt against Curry, Assistant Attorney General Charles A. Schneider, seeks leadership of this district and has aided in drafting the petition against the Tammany chieftain.

Foes Claim 18 Votes.

Curry foes have claimed 18 of the 25 members of the executive committee of Tammany—more than sufficient to oust the leader.

Only one dominant factor to cause a delay in the ouster move, apparently, has developed. There has been no agreement on a steering committee to take over Curry's leadership until a successor is elected.

One person seemingly certain to be a member of this steering group is Mrs. Joyce Bushel, who received a curt "Good afternoon" when she pointedly told Curry to get out during a visit last week.

New York, April 16 (AP).—A substantial increase in the number of inquiries made by railroad managers for new equipment has given encouragement to locomotive manufacturers after three of the meanest years in their history from the point of view of earnings.

Baby, Year Old, to Get Twentieth Transfusion

Monrovia, Calif., April 16 (AP). Because her body can not produce the necessary red corpuscles to keep her alive, 1-year-old Patricia O'Boyle will receive her twentieth blood transfusion here this week.

After each transfusion her blood count has fallen steadily and another has been necessary within three weeks. Blood for all but one injection has been supplied by her father, J. H. O'Boyle.

ABC Offers Plan for Sales Near Schools

Liquor Dealers Would Be Required to Give Up Children's Trade.

The Board of Education was asked yesterday to drop its protests on the granting of "off sale" retail licenses for beer and light wine where the retail establishments were adjacent to schools.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board made the request with the stipulation that any persons granted such licenses must discontinue the sale of penny candy, ice cream cones and other things designed for the trade of children.

Henry Gilligan, chairman of the school board's legislative committee, who delivered the board's protests yesterday, agreed that he would take up the matter at the regular meeting of the Board of Education tomorrow.

This question of child patronage of places which have made application to sell various kinds of beverages has figured in all the hearings on the granting of licenses near to schools.

In many cases, the school authorities have dropped their protest when it was proved that the store in question did little or no business with children. Presence of cheap candy, school supplies and ice cream cones has been taken as evidence that the stores do seek child patronage.

Jones Will Submit Cotton Bill Today

Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, of the Agriculture Committee, yesterday postponed until today submission to the House of the conference report on the Bankhead compulsory cotton control bill, the Associated Press reported.

The report was received only yesterday from the Senate, which approved it Saturday. It limits cotton production to 10,000,000 bales in the coming crop year, and imposes a tax on cotton produced in excess of quotas.

Jones expects favorable House action.

Mrs. Roosevelt Denies Report She Aspires to Head D. A. R.

Spikes Rumor She's "Dark Horse" Candidate as Old Tradition Looms.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday spiked reports that she was a "dark horse" candidate for president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

"I'm most certainly not a candidate," she said.

Thus the budding plan to restore the old tradition of the D. A. R. to give its chief office to a woman in the front rank of National life received a setback.

Managers of other prospects breathed more freely and proceeded again with their grooming of their candidates for the preliminary work of getting acquainted with as many delegates as possible in order to lay the groundwork for the active campaign in 1935, when the new president general is to be elected.

Mrs. Roosevelt joined the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution last year as a member at large, but has never held office of any kind in the organization. She is not attending the sessions of the present Continental Congress, except to address the membership on Friday morning on the education of mountain children. The Continental Congress will also be received by her at the White House Friday afternoon.

The first president general of the D. A. R. was Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, who served during the Presidency of her husband. Others who served in the same office were Mrs. Adlai Stevenson and Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks, wives of Vice Presidents.

Mrs. Wingfield, Lynchburg, Dies.

Lynchburg, Va., April 16 (AP).—Mrs. Samuel Wingfield, widow of a Confederate veteran and prominent attorney of Lynchburg, died at her home here yesterday. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning.

Stephan Will Filed in Court

Widow of D. C. National Guard Head Chief Beneficiary.

Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan, commanding the District National Guard, named his widow, Mrs. Cecelia J. Stephan, as the principal beneficiary of his estate, it was shown in the District Supreme Court yesterday, when his will was filed.

No petition for probate of the estate was made and there was thus no accompanying estimate of its size.

After several small bequests are made, Mrs. Stephan is to be given the remainder of the estate for life, or until she marries. Upon her death or remarriage the estate is to be divided between Harold R. Stephan, a son, and Mrs. Thelma C. Millican, a daughter. Mrs. Stephan and her son are named as executors.

Small bequests are made to three nieces. Lulu M. Lybrand will get $500; Marguerite Evans, $250 and Ethel Evans Wyncoop, $250. Travel and history books are to be given to Lulu Lybrand.

Release of Russian Rubles to Be Asked

Former Senator Smith W. Brookhart, Administration economic adviser, said yesterday he had communicated with Soviet Union officials in hopes of releasing 100,000 gold rubles said to have been buried in Russia by an adhereent to the former czar before he was forced to flee the country.

At the present rate of exchange, the cache is valued at $88,000.

City Politics In Shenandoah County Quiet

Mayors All Unopposed; No Candidates File in Edinburgh.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 16 (Spl.). None of the mayors of Shenandoah County towns will be opposed for reelection by candidates who filed before the Friday midnight deadline. Some may have opposition if a campaign for writing names on ballots is staged.

Edinburg does not have any candidate for mayor. Even Mayor Houston H. Newman did not seek relection. Citizens there are content to quietly support the candidates and then write in names on the ballot.

New Market had a warm fight at the last municipal election but this did not materialize this year. Mayor G. A. Woods is unopposed for reelection.

Mayor Hugh Morrison, jr., of Woodstock, and Mayor G. G. Crawford, of Strasburg, are unopposed for reelection after long terms. Mayor J. Lee Stoneburner, of Mount Jackson, also is unopposed.

She sustained serious injuries, her attorneys said, and they asked $50,000 damages.

Admiral Hamlet Moves to Prevent Distress Among Families.

Norfolk, Va., April 16 (Spl.).—Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, commander in chief of the Coast Guard, is doing all in his power to prevent distress among families of Coast Guard men because of recent transfers made necessary by President Roosevelt's economy plan, W. A. Cox, port director for Hampton Roads, said today.

Mr. Cox said he had received a letter from Representative S. Otis Bland, of the First Virginia District, who had consulted Admiral Hamlet on the subject.

"With a cut in appropriations something had to be done," said the State port director. "It was a case of cut pay rolls and fire men regardless of what happened to them or their families, or decommission certain units and spread the personnel through the Coast Guard in general on sea and shore duty."

It has been necessary to abandon the group system of operations, because it no longer will be possible to support the necessary bases.

Virginia Liquor Permits Denied 4 Out of 1,524

Beer Sign Costs One Man His License; 111 Issued, 150 Protested.

Richmond, April 16 (Spl.).—Only four of 1,524 applications for licenses have been refused thus far by the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Each of the four rejections applied to applications here, one of which was turned down because the applicant had not removed a beer sign given him by a brewery and another because his establishment was a soda fountain and not a bonafide "sit-down" eating place.

It was announced today that 111 unopposed licenses have been issued, most of them to Richmond applicants. Of the others, 150 are being held up pending hearings on protests that the locations are not "proper places," and 1,259 are being investigated.

R. McC. Bullington, member of the board, today was on his way back from Harrisburg, Pa., where he has been studying details of the Pennsylvania system.

Work on improvements to the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railway warehouse, being leased by the board for use as a central storage and distributing point for board stocks of spirits and wine, proceeded rapidly today.

World Liquor Drive Forecast

Virginia Educator Says Prohibition Must Be Moral Issue.

Roanoke, Va., April 16 (AP).—Asserting that there "is no neutrality on the liquor question," Paul H. Bowman, president of Bridgewater College, Bridgewater, Va., forecast a campaign for "international prohibition" in an address at Troutville High School, near here.

Speaking before 600 temperance workers of Botetourt County, Mr. Bowman said yesterday that the return of legal liquor was due to the fact that prohibition had become a political rather than a moral issue.

"Hereafter," he said, "we shall see that it is kept a moral issue."

"I shall follow the lead of no ordinary politician," the educator promised. "There are too many men who aspire to public office for its honor and prestige—there are too many men willing to declare themselves dry if they can get office that way, but they will be wet if the chances are better.

"The next blow will be for international prohibition, not national prohibition, and that, I prophesy, will be the death blow to the liquor industry."

Virginian Tripped On Check Charge

Winchester Youth Held at Martinsburg, W. Va.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 16 (Spl.).—Hunter Brown, 24, of Winchester, Va., was in jail here today facing a hearing on a charge of having forged the signature of J. Snowden Weber, a farmer, to five checks and obtaining merchandise and cash from merchants.

Police said he confessed. He added, they said, that he had spent all the cash and sold the merchandise. All checks were issued against one bank here last week. They were turned down at the bank as drawn against a non-existent account.

Brown's procedure, police said, was to order supplies from five different stores in person, and ask for cash for the balance of the check amount. Checks were drawn to "cash."

Kilmarnock, Va., April 16 (Spl.). For the second time the Lancaster County School Board deadlocked the motion that the Kilmarnock High School be taken into the county school system for the current session.

Since the withdrawal of the first motion, the Legislature passed a bill providing that in case of a tie vote in any school board, the judge of the Circuit Court shall appoint one of the commissioners in chancery in the county to break the tie.

Judge Smith of the Lancaster Circuit Court will be called upon to appoint a tie-breaker in the present vote.

Rigid New Rum Rule to Govern V. M. I. Cadets

Drinking, or Possession of Liquor, Will Bring Instant Dismissal.

Lexington, Va., April 16 (AP).—Drinking, or possession of alcoholic liquor, is made grounds for summary dismissal from Virginia Military Institute, under rules announced today.

The regulation is one of a series formulated for the discipline of new cadets necessitated by the scrapping of the "rat" system.

A general committee of cadets from all classes at the institution will enforce the new rules and will prescribe penalties for violation of certain class privileges.

Among the restrictions embodied in the new code are:

New cadets are permitted to fall out for dinner formations on Saturdays and Sundays, while old cadets may fall out from any meal formation.

New cadets are required to speak to upper classmen as in the past.

They are prohibited from having radios or phonographs in their rooms.

They must conform to special rules regarding personal appearance.

They must attend all athletic events.

They must remove hats in barrack rooms in the presence of upper classmen.

Town in Maryland Bans Hitch-Hikers

Williamsport, Md., April 16 (Spl.). "Thumbing rides" has been banned by town officials after numerous complaints, and orders went to police officers to break up the practice here.

Three youths last night were ordered to appear before a magistrate. Girls are as guilty as boys of the practice, town officials say. The line-up of hikers who want to go to Hagerstown is a menace to traffic, the police feel.

Garrett County Clerk Is Out for Reelection

Oakland, Md., April 16 (Spl.).—Albert G. Ross, clerk of the Garrett County Circuit Court, has announced his candidacy for reelection. He is the second person to announce for the office, James Willison having filed four weeks ago.

Mark H. Moon has announced for the Republican nomination for sheriff. Orville Stark and J. W. Glotfelty have already announced for the same position.

White Robin Attracts Interest at Hospital

Terra Alta, W. Va., April 16 (Spl.).—An attraction at the State Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Hopemont, near here, is an albino robin, which has made its home at the institution.

Observers say the bird, apparently a female, is perfectly white with pink eyes, bill and feet. It is always accompanied by a robin of normal color. The pair are building a nest in a tree on the lawn.

Methodist Conference Bans Rum Board Jobs

Harrisonburg, Va., April 16 (Spl.). Preachers and members of the Methodist Church were called upon to abstain from any pursuits connected with intoxicating liquors in resolutions adopted at the Rockingham District conference held here.

The resolutions call upon the members not to take employment under the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and to refrain from renting property for dispensaries.

Wider Social Control Urged By Cummings

Work for "New Liberty" Is Described at U. of Va.

Charlottesville, Va., April 16 (AP). Homer S. Cummings, Attorney General of the United States, told the School of Law at the University of Virginia tonight that government "must exercise greater powers of social control" to "secure liberty in terms of the public welfare."

Delivering the first of a series of three lectures before the law school, the Attorney General said that "to protect liberty in terms of the individual," individual effort and "collective effort within the social and economic process itself" is demanded.

"I think," he asserted, "it is the realization of this that explains our current demands for self-regulation, codes of business conduct, and a 'planned economy.' Surely the present crisis is not the result of the breakdown of character, rather it is due to the failure of the various groups in the economic structure to function in terms of intelligent cooperation. This is what these demands mean. Implicit therein lies a new concept of both individual and collective liberty."

"Civilization," Mr. Cummings said, "in response to the forces of life, is constantly undergoing various transformations. While the old order is changing, our social structure faces neither collapse nor revolution. Even though the relations and subordinations of man to the state may change, his instinctive attitudes, like those toward liberty and justice, do not change. Our immediate concepts of liberty, however, also take on new aspects."

Now that the economic system "is so palpably out of balance," the Attorney General said, "we certainly see many evidences of the formulation of new ideals in which the function of liberty takes on new aspects. After winning our long fight for political liberty, the economic era has now disclosed to us that it was but a pyrrhic victory for individual liberty, and that something more and better must follow."

Jones Gives "Little Thought" to Cross

RFC Aid's Loan Fails to Excite Chief.

Chairman Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation said yesterday he had "given little thought" to the case of Guernsey T. Cross, former secretary to Franklin D. Roosevelt, and now employed by the RFC, whose promissory note was held by Max Greenberg, slain beer baron.

Cross described the loan last week as a "personal matter" and denied that he had known Greenberg's identity when he signed the note.

"All I knew about Cross' loan," Jones said, "was what I read in the newspapers."

Miss Lockwood To Give Recital

Young Organist Will Play at Church Here Tomorrow.

Charlotte Lockwood, F. A. G. O., one of the most talented young native organists, will be presented by the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Guild of Organists in a recital tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. in the First Congregational Church. A pupil of Clarence Dickinson, Charlie Marie Widor and Gunther Ramin, Miss Lockwood has established a National reputation.

Her program is announced as follows: "Allegro Maestoso" from Sonata in G (Sir Edward Elgar), Variations on the Chorale, "Thou Prince of Peace" (Johann Bernhard Bach), Gavotte in F (Samuel Wesley), Ave Maria (Arcadelt), Fantasia and Fugue on the Chorale, "How Brightly Shines the Morning Star" (Max Reger), The Song of the Lake (Karg-Elert), Scherzo from Sonata (Horatio Parker), Cradle Song (Traditional Bohemian), Chorale-Improvisation on "In Dulci Jubilo" (Karg-Elert).

This interesting list contains works rarely heard. Sir Edward Elgar, who died recently, is not generally known in this country as a composer for organ. Johann Bernhard Bach was a cousin of Johann Sebastian. Samuel Wesley (1766-1827), a brilliant organist and the first to introduce Bach's music in England, was the father of Samuel Sebastian Wesley, the famous composer of hymns.

Commissioners Map D.C. Aid Plan Today

Move to Gain 18 Million to Be Outlined.

The District Commissioners will make a final decision today on a method of obtaining $18,000,000 for several construction projects including a sewage disposal plant and a new tuberculosis hospital when they will meet with the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

A new plan, said to have the approval of Frederic A. Delano, head of the park body, will be presented by the Commissioners. Its salient features are asking permission of Congress to permit the acceptance of the sum from the Public Works Administration and to pay 70 per cent of it back in $1,000,000 yearly instalments—the other 30 per cent being an outright grant.

Georgetown Records Quake in East Indies

Georgetown University's seismograph recorded a severe earthquake, about 9,000 miles away, starting at 5:34 p. m. Sunday, reaching its maximum intensity at 6:20 p. m., and ending at 8 p. m., according to the Associated Press.

Those in charge of the instrument calculated the quake occurred in the East India Islands, south of the Philippines.

How to Keep Well

A Little Iron, Please.

There is more need for iron as a tonic than physicians are able to prove. It would be well to have a revival of the former popularity of iron springs. As health resorts they were justified just as much so as were sulphur springs, hot springs, and radium springs. It would be better for us if we could go back to some of our old-time rule-of-thumb iron tonics—even our spring tonics that contained iron.

We have gone rather too far in our loss of faith in things that could not be proved. The writer wants to go on record as thinking we have lost in more ways than one by losing faith in more than one field.

And, on top of it all, we have overstressed insistence upon foods that are good in other directions, but are poor in iron. The controversy as to how much inorganic iron the body can absorb and make use of is far from settled. Physiologists are still arguing about it and probably will continue for some time.

Meanwhile, the importance of iron in the tissues is being stressed. Iron is the very core of hemoglobin, the substance in the blood which carries oxygen to the tissues and also transports waste gases from them. The tissues can no more work without oxygen than fires can burn without air. And the need of removal of waste gases is on a par with the need of smokestacks, chimneys, and stovepipes.

But hemoglobin formation is not the only place where iron is needed. The body cells, as well as the blood cells, need it. An insufficiency of iron is recognized as one of the factors making for high blood pressure. When long continued it helps to bring about muscle weakness of the heart. And disorders of the heart muscle outrank disorders of the heart valves as a cause of inefficiency, discomfort, and death.

Tissue hunger for oxygen long insufficiently satisfied is recognized as a possible cause of some of the chronic organic diseases commonly called degenerative diseases. It is not enough to have plenty of oxygen in the outside air or even in the lungs. There must be enough right under the noses of the cells that do their work in the distant jungles of the human body. To get it we need to eat more foods rich in iron. That means meats, yellow of eggs, liver, and tripe, as well as vegetables that make for blood formation. The children will be glad to know that spinach is not ranked at the head of such foods, although it is still on the list.

In addition, there seems to be a need of iron tonics, including some of the old-fashioned kind. Tincture of chloride of iron has never been a logical combination. The word tincture means that the drug, whatever it is, is dissolved in weak alcohol. The reason for tinctures is that the alcohol is needed to dissolve the drug and to prevent it from spoiling.

The drugs in tincture of chloride of iron are muriatic acid and iron. Neither needs alcohol as a solvent nor as a preservative. The dose of alcohol is too small for jag purposes. Then why use it? Nor can we prove that muriatic acid helps iron, or vice versa, when they are in combination. There is just no logic in it, or none that is provable. But wide and long experience has made the combination popular, and that is something of an argument. But we are far from being limited to that preparation in selecting our iron tonic.

Moisture.

Mrs. E. M. writes: I have been housekeeping for 20 years and we have always used the regular radiator pans and modern contraptions to give moisture in heated rooms. However, in spite of all this, each winter we went through a number of terrible colds, flu, &c. Then two years ago my son started raising tropical fish as a hobby. To save space we put two tanks on radiators. We insulated the top of the radiators just so the water in the glass tank remains at 80 degrees during the day. In the two years we have had this practice no member of the family has had a cold and not the slightest watering of the nose. Yet we live the same and eat the same as we always did. I believe what I have found out is that the average pan used on a radiator does not give adequate moisture. Perhaps you can pass this on to some other cold sufferer.

Never Snub A Postman.

Even the postman did not know who he was, living in the Villa Ker Monique in the village of Barbizon. And it was that astounding fact which led to the unmasking of the mysterious M. Sodrov. For the postman to be surprised at happenings in a French village is unprecedented, so when the Mayor discovered this amazing state of affairs he called the police. After much consultation between the Surete Generale in Paris and the local gendarmerie at the village where Rousseau and Millet are buried, which Robert Louis Stevenson loved so well, a raid was staged. Gaboriau and Maurice LeBlanc would have been happy to have been present taking notes.

Even the economies of the cable have not robbed it of all its delightful nuances. The thin, dark, foreign young man, dashing through the famous forest with a satchel of mail, trapped only when his cycle's light failed. The barking police dogs scaring inquisitive villagers away. The chagrined postman. The little man in horn-rimmed glasses and goatee, occasionally shuffling warily through the garden, disappearing as soon as any one came near. The sudden descent of the police. The forced entrance. The dash into an inner room where sat this same scary little man, with two pistols loaded on his desk. The officials saying, "Who are you?" and the calm answer, "They call me Sodrov." And the final admission that he was, after all, the great Revolutionist, Leon Trotsky, hiding and plotting still.

But, alas, there is a little too much of the grand gesture for these cynical days. Only the Caspar Milquetoasts will quake at hearing of Trotsky's plans for a Fourth International, which has for its object a plot to keep the world in constant revolutionary turmoil—as if that needed any plot! We even doubt that the French will be alarmed, though certain of them may make much of the incident. For whatever other significance the raid may have, it will serve to keep French minds off the Stavisky mess for a while. And many a French official will welcome anything which does that!

Frances Haldeman Sidwell.

In the growing complexity of modern life there are few occupations whose social necessity remains as unchanged as is the case with the teaching profession. In periods of chaos and confusion, as in times of ease and tranquillity, the importance of training the coming generation to confront its problems is unwavering. The technique of instruction, like all techniques, is a matter of experimentation and improvement. But the goal of education—to draw out of the individual the best of his or her latent powers—is constant. This it is which makes teachers, particularly teachers of young children, so stabilizing a force in the modern community.

Mrs. Thomas W. Sidwell, who died on Sunday, will be remembered as one of those rare teachers who thoroughly understand the true function of education. Because of that understanding she was able to contribute greatly to improvement of local scholastic levels. As co-principal of the Friends School established by her husband in 1883, she has carved a lasting monument to her personality in the later lives of hundreds of Washington children whom she helped to find and to fulfill themselves.

No tribute could be finer than the affection felt for Mrs. Sidwell and her husband by those old pupils whose childhood respect has grown with the passing years. No sympathy for Mr. Sidwell could be deeper than that of those who know from personal experience how much his lifelong partner contributed to building the fine reputation which the Friends School has today.

The Way Of Deflation.

While Congress is daily concocting new schemes for spending public money and raising prices, under the impression that prosperity lies in that direction, Italy has resolved to cut government outlays and seek for recovery on the basis of lowered costs and prices. The Italian council of ministers has decreed a program of general deflation. A reduction in the budget is by no means the most significant change. The decrees aim to bring about a general cut in production and living costs as well as lower salaries for state employes. The result will be to offset in some measure the unfavorable effects of currency depreciation in other parts of the world.

Italian export trade has suffered severe declines from the effect of devaluation of foreign currencies which has left Italy's domestic prices, quoted on a gold basis, at a relatively high level. Tourist trade upon which the country depends greatly, has also been unfavorably affected. The reduction of living costs is designed not only to offset lower wages and salaries, but to revive the tourist trade. Of course, the budgetary savings which lead to lower taxes will contribute materially to the general deflationary movement.

Forced to choose between inflation or deflation, Premier Mussolini prefers to reduce prices and protect the lira. He is in the position of being able to act swiftly and to apply his program to industry in general, whereas the French are forced to move slowly in the face of political opposition. In case of private industry, they have to wait, moreover, for the slower processes of price readjustment to take place under economic pressure. Both countries, however, believe that the solution of their recovery problems lies in clinging to stable currencies and following sound fiscal policies. It is interesting to see how far nations which have experienced the inflation calamity are willing to go to avoid its repetition.

No Government Obligation.

Strong Congressional support exists for the McLeod bill and various alternative proposals which call for immediate payment in full to depositors in closed banks, out of sums advanced by the R. F. C. Despite opposition from the Administration, Speaker Rainey predicts that if the legislation is brought to a vote it will pass both House and Senate. The costs are a matter for guesswork, but estimates vary from sums slightly in excess of $1,000,000,000 to three or four times that amount, according to the scope of the contemplated plan.

However viewed, payments of this sort would constitute an outrageous diversion of public funds. The benefits which sponsors of the McLeod bill claim to anticipate would be more than offset by the impairment of public credit resulting from such an indefensible raid upon the Treasury. Moreover, as Secretary Morgenthau says, the depositors concerned constitute a very small proportion of all depositors and the sums they might disburse would not provide any great stimulus to business. There is no question in this legislation of doing the community a service by bringing moribund banks to life. The McLeod plan is an outright subsidy urged on the extraordinary theory that Government regulation of banks has created a moral obligation to protect depositors from loss.

Thus we proceed, step by step, from a false premise—that it is the function of the State to coddle the individual—to conclusions which are rapidly becoming fantastic in character. As Mr. Morgenthau pointed out, the same argument now used to urge passage of the McLeod bill might be applied to attempts to recover losses as "remote as those arising from stock exchange transactions in the event the Government assumed control of the market."

Those who seek to prove that the Government is responsible for losses due to the individual mistakes, dishonesty, adverse conditions or slipshod legislation that have resulted in thousands of bank closings, can not stop with that assertion. If that is the case, then the private banker no longer has good reason to be cautious in the conduct of his business. Indeed those bankers who have mishandled their trust might be relieved of all blame and have their statues erected as benefactors of the planned economy. From their misdeeds we draw the curious moral that the State should make good, and thereby tacitly approve, acts of individual dishonesty, incompetence or misfortune.

A Monument.

On Sunday the final edition of the morning Public Ledger rolled from its Philadelphia presses, and its editors wrote "30" at the foot of the last page. The evening edition will continue; the morning is merged with the Inquirer.

This passing, after 98 years, does not so much mark the termination of a journalistic epoch as it emphasizes the end of a chapter in Quaker City history which really closed some years ago. The morning Ledger had lost its earlier characteristics in trying to seek a later clientele. The significant fact is that its old clientele had vanished.

Time was when the morning Public Ledger was "the paper" to all the influential among Philadelphia's population. In the days of George W. Childs' ownership, the aristocrat of the Philadelphia Club read no other journal behind his Walnut street windows; Archbishop Ryan and Bishop Whittaker read no other, and no other was read by the rubicund politicians of the Union League. Through the brief Ochs ownership, this sort of thing continued. But shortly after the purchase by Cyrus H. K. Curtis, it could continue no longer.

For the influential Philadelphians of the later day were found to be neither physical nor mental children of the old. They demanded another sort of news-treatment and another sort of editorial comment. Times had changed. They kept on changing. Prohibition agents could, and did, raid the Philadelphia Club. A heavy percentage of names in the Philadelphia Social Register is now what elder Philadelphians would have dismissed as "unknown." The morning Ledger has simply ceased trying to reshape itself to these ever-altering alterations. It has ceased to be a newspaper—but it will never cease to be a tradition.

What Goes Up—

George C. Tyler, whose productions in the theater range from Hall Caine's "The Christian" to "The Constant Nymph," has written his memoirs. He calls them "What Goes Up—." They are lively reminiscences dating from the days when, as advance agent, he swung about the country pestering editors with hand-outs and pasting his posters over those of his rival. Every so often Mr. Tyler stops to cast aspersions on the modern stage. In effect, he says that when he was one of its tycoons it was The Theater, but now it is only show business.

Otis Skinner, another elder of the stage, thinks pretty well of the days when he also was young, but he is not so critical. "The theater's been going to the dogs ever since the days of Aeschylus and Aristophanes," he said the other day with a chuckle. "The exercise that it gets going to the dogs keeps it in good condition, and will for centuries." Mr. Skinner is doubtless more nearly right than Mr. Tyler. It is rather unfortunate that the latter's grudging remarks should be broadcast near the close of one of the best seasons The Theater, or show business, has had in recent years.

The current theater, as Brooks Atkinson says, at least represents the thought of today as "honestly as Mr. Tyler's years of plenty represented the thought of that well-upholstered era." He mentions "As Thousands Cheer," "She Loves Me Not," "They Shall Not Die," "Mary of Scotland" and "Yellow Jack" as plays of which it need not be ashamed, even if their production is show business. That list appears to be sufficient evidence that the stage has not entirely gone to the dogs.

Certainly most so-called moderns would find any one of those plays better suited to their taste than "Monte Cristo," or "Miss Philadelphia," "The Christian" or "The Garden of Allah." Sometimes the elder statesmen have to be reminded by the young upstarts that our time is not their time, to paraphrase the theme song of our most noted exponent of show business. It is a rare ancient who, like Otis Skinner understands the folly of "bludgeoning the present with the big stick of the past."

Misplaced Authority.

Opposition by several members of the House District Committee to various sections of the local appropriations bill illustrates once more the careless manner in which District legislation is handled on Capitol Hill. Only a few members of Congress take a real interest in the affairs of the Capital City. Most of these are members of the District committees, but, strange as it seems, the District committees have no jurisdiction over the local budget. With this inconsistent division of authority, it is not surprising that local issues are confused and an apathetic attitude toward Washington prevails.

The appropriations bill now before the House was drafted by a subcommittee of the regular appropriations committee. Not one of its five members is associated with the District Committee. Many of its views are contrary to the opinions of those representatives whose business it is to study Washington's problems. For example, Chairman Norton, of the District Committee, is opposed to the reduction of taxes recommended by the appropriations group. "I do not believe in lowering taxes at the price of human misery," she says. But Mrs. Norton and her associates on the District Committee have no opportunity to draft a budget measure.

It is obviously absurd to give one group special jurisdiction over affairs of the National Capital and deny that body any control over the municipal purse strings. Almost every question that arises is related in some way to the budget. Appropriation bills are the most important local measures enacted by Congress. The members of Congress who are most interested in Washington as well as District officials are frustrated at every turn because this city of nearly 500,000 inhabitants is treated, for all budgetary purposes, as a Federal bureau.

Experience during the last few years affords no hope that the problems of the District will be given adequate consideration until this system is changed. Under the present arrangement well-informed citizens and civic groups do not even get fair hearings for projects in which they are interested. This control over the District budget by officials who are not in touch with local affairs, and have little interest in them, appears to be the most serious defect in our municipal government.

Against Silver Raids.

Speaker Rainey states that silver legislation is not included in the Administration's program for this session. Since he was urging the passage of such legislation a short time ago, his change of heart indicates that the President has taken a decided stand against doing anything more for silver. According to Mr. Rainey, the President prefers to continue the purchasing plan devised last summer at the time of the London conference. That agreement is described by a well-known British economist, Prof. T. E. Gregory, as a "scheme tantamount to providing an artificial market for 140,000,000 ounces (of silver) within the next four years at the expense of the purchasing governments and for preventing the Indian government from clearing its stocks too rapidly."

Apparently the Chinese have been reluctant to assent to this arrangement and are reported to be considering a reservation which would permit them to withdraw from the agreement if its object—stabilization of the price of silver—is disregarded. In other words, China does not want to raise silver prices since it would result in internal deflation.

In any case, the silver bloc in Congress is not satisfied with the Administration's silver-buying plan, although for good measure it added a bonus for domestic silver producers. Nothing less than remonetization of silver, or silver purchases on the grand scale to cover supplies from all parts of the world, appears to be adequate for the appetites of this group. The chief defense against these attacks upon the integrity of the currency and the credit of the Government lies in the President's opposition. The announcement of the Speaker gives hope that the Administration will be able to rally effective support for a fight against the silver raiders.

"Ignorance."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau joined the silly sloppy school of economic illiterates when, before the House Ways and Means Committee, he asserted that increasing the taxes on great incomes would drive taxable capital into tax-exempt securities. It is deplorable that one so ignorant should hold so high a place in our Government, but this is just what might be expected when practically all the college and university professors, and all the editors of our newspapers, are equally ignorant.

What are the facts about the effect of high income taxes on the investment of what Mr. Morgenthau calls "capital," but is in reality the exchange of money for securities of some kind? Capital is material things; factories, blast furnaces, buildings, machinery, and other labor products devoted to the production and distribution of wealth. Capital can be swapped for bonds, stocks or other titles of wealth, but it can not be "invested" in them.

What happens if John Jones sells taxable stock to Bill Smith, and buys tax-exempt bonds? Is there any less money for investment Not one dollar less. Smith has the money that Jones got for his stocks, and to get a return on it he must loan it or buy securities. There is merely a shifting around of money—the total of which is neither increased nor decreased by using it to buy real capital or paper titles to wealth. Yet a man capable of this muddling confusion of capital with money is the financial chief of our National Government! A fine example of our brain trust thinking.

Working Wives.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I suppose I can afford another 2 cents today to point out to you that a lot of that talk Mrs. Shouse gave in the radio broadcast is "bunk."

As a single woman, I think that married women who have employed husbands earning a good salary like Mrs. Garner, Mrs. Rainey and Mrs. Roosevelt are extremely selfish to say the least.

I have heard more single girls complain than you can imagine that they simply can't find work to do, because the selfish married women not only have one job, but some of them three.

In 1927 I went to the oil field of Texas, as I heard there were positions vacant as secretaries, with good salaries. I made a tour of all the big oil company offices, and found that it was true there were nice, easy, secretarial positions with good pay, but they were all filled by married women. These women wore good clothes, had two or three diamond rings, and seemed to be enjoying life immensely. Of course, they all had their own cars.

Mrs. Shouse contended it is only the unequipped who suffer from unemployment.

I think Mrs. Shouse shows that she is not intelligent enough to fill whatever positions she has when she makes that statement.

And regarding "not enough teachers of adult education," ask the supervisor of any public school system to show you the list of applicants. There are millions and millions of them.

I certainly think, too, that something ought to be done to prevent Mrs. Roosevelt from running around the country advocating that married women make the best teachers or the best of anything.

MISS E. BRANDS.

Louisville.

Mr. Ranson Replies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recent letters to the editor contain one from Mr. Coles, who, it seems, does not like my recent remarks condemning a pension system that gives an emergency officer much more than an enlisted man of the World War, but I'm afraid he can produce nothing constructive to justify such a system.

I found many lawyers, engineers and business executives serving in the ranks, and when they came home, they in most cases, resumed their vocations. Those that were disabled in action, in some cases, were helped out by an enlisted man's compensation grant.

Reference to my own record and intimation that I belong to the Economy League, like the usual boloney about Regular Army pay, is the bunk. If I hadn't stated I served in the World War in both enlisted and commissioned grades the usual practice is to brand a writer of a letter like mine as a "draft dodger," &c. I have no sympathy with the Economy League and consider it one of the most mercenary lobbies in the United States.

Mr. Coles makes me laugh when he talks about "intelligent public opinion of the Nation" being responsible for the creation of the emergency officer grade. What he really meant is that the key men of the major American Legion posts in this country, most of them beneficiaries under the act, supported in Washington by a lobby second only to the Economy League, drove this legislation through Congress and then cluttered up the retired list with so many "goldbrickers" that its stench reached to the high heavens.

HARRY W. RANSON.

Washington.

Sees Buyers' Strike.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since the first moment in which the NRA was launched higher prices for the manufactured products of the country have been in vogue. It took the big boys perhaps 24 hours to get their prices up and in doing so most naturally clog the wheels of commerce to the extent of the difference between the old price lists and the new, since the buying public is in no better condition to meet present prices than it was to pay the old price. That, of course, was not the intention of the promoters of NRA, yet that is exactly what has happened. Of course, the reaction to this condition first takes the head of the dealer, but in turn affects to the same extent the manufacturer. When the customer declines to take the merchandise at the higher price, necessarily the dealer does not place an order.

There is another thing in connection with these increased prices, and that is quantities in which the merchant can buy to advantage have been increased, adding in that way a burden to the merchant. The present set-up is most surely to the advantage of all parties, because the buyer must be able to get his hands on the money before he can buy the merchandise he needs, and there is no money just now in general circulation. The intention of Washington was, beyond a doubt, based on the thought of cooperation and that would have been a wonderful movement where everybody went along together with the thought of neither doing anything to the immediate injury or disadvantage of the other. That is not the spirit which is driving us to our Waterloo all-hands-around. It is beginning to appear doubtful that our citizenship will ever be able to grasp an idea of self-preservation, notwithstanding that has always been acknowlegded as "the first law of nature."

In Cherry Blossom Time.

A Springtime Idyl of Washington

By Constantine M. Perkins.

There is a spot justly renown'd
Which Fame has set apart,
In which God's miracle has crown'd
Man's noblest work of art—
A spot where devotees resort
To worship at a shrine
Where Nature's alchemy is wrought
And Beauty's arts combine.

* * * *

An oriflamm'd phenomenon
Of loveliness sublime,
Transplanted from the Rising Sun,
Far Nippon's flowery clime:
Its charm enraptures everyone
And may excuse this rhyme,
Inspired, here, in Washington,
At cherry blossom time.

* * * *

I conjure visions of Japan,
Of smiling Samurai;
Of Geisha girls—O Youchi San,
Of maidens sweet and shy—
Who, 'neath the rays of Rising Sun,
In graceful pantomime,
Are dancing here, in Washington,
At cherry blossom time.

* * * *

By Fancy's flight or sorcery's
Esthetic art, behold!—
Beneath the gorgeous cherry trees
A pageant is unrolled;
The retinue of some Shogun—
Imperial, sublime—
Assembled here, in Washington,
At cherry blossom time.

In regal splendor I decry
An ancient feudal lord,
Escorted by his Samurai,
Accounter'd each, with sword;
In pomp and panoply of old
Reclines the Tycoon, Daimio, 'neath canopy of gold,
In cherry blossom time.

* * * *

I see the sacred Lotus ponds
And Tori gates, where stood a
Brooding bulk of burnish'd bronze—
The Kamakura Buddha!
And, 'neath the spell caprice has spun,
I seem to hear the chime
Of temple bells—in Washington
At cherry blossom time.

* * * *

On lang'rous, Lotus-laden air
I hear the Buddhist drums—
The pulsing, palpitating prayer,
"Om mane padme!" hums;
Now, low it drones, now high intones
Dai Lama, pious priest—
As incense-breathing eve enthrones
The esoteric East.

* * * *

No brush can limn, no colors paint
Their billowy clouds of pink.
My palsied pen, feeble and faint,
Fails and my Muses shrink:
The gossamer lace-work of the sun-
Light filt'ring through the grime,
Along the walks of Washington
In cherry blossom time!

The Post Impressionist

Bigger and Better Beers.

Postoffice, Tuesday.

Another bloated boast of the vaunting Empire State has been punctured. Ever since the National shout of "Beer's Back," New York has been bragging that more of the amber brew was consumed between Niagara Falls and Far Rockaway than anywhere else in the country. The implication was that the individual New Yorker's capacity outfathomed the capacity of other Americans. Now Dr. Joseph Dubin has made a social survey and compiled statistics puncturing this assumption.

Dr. Dubin is editor of that scholarly publication, The Brewery Age, which we confess to find interesting reading. He admits that, "from the re-legalization of beer to December 31, 1933," New York, the biggest beer-producer, was also the greatest beer consumer—in aggregate. The total consumption ran to "over three and three-quarter million barrels." But, he supplements, "New York ranked second (among the States) from the standpoint of per capita consumption."

There, as they might say at a nominating convention, New York yields to Wisconsin. The Badger Boys beat the Harlem Hoisters. "The famous beer State of Wisconsin, second largest producer of beer," Dr. Dubin affirms, has "by far the largest per capita consumption." It is all very well for New Yorkers to blame this on rate-cutting and to clamor that "nickel beer" is available in most Badger taverns; the vanquished can't obliterate the figures:

Wisconsin	12.24 gallons
New York	9.27 gallons

Well does the Post-Impressionist know the gallant spirit behind that twelve-point-twenty-four. When we were out in Milwaukee last Autumn, the New York cousin of a Wisconsin patriot pretended to be worried by the latter's enviable efforts to boost the figure. The New Yorker took his relative up in an airplane one evening and pointed to the many brightly lighted breweries below.

"Conrad," said the visitor, "look at those. There's no use in your trying to drink all they produce. You can't do it."

"Maybe not," replied the resolute Conrad—"but I've got 'em working nights, anyhow."

And Pennsylvania, true to her title, stands a close third on Dr. Dubin's list. The Keystone State rings the bell with 8.81. This, too, is true to tradition—a phrase that you can't enunciate after eight glasses unless you are able to drink beer like a Pennsylvanian.

We remember a New Yorker blustering in a rural Pennsylvania bar about some Manhattan bibber who could drink three steins without drawing breath. A local magnate replied:

"That's nothing. You see that fellow over there? He's the hired man at our house. He can drink a bucket of beer without breathing."

The New Yorker dared to doubt. A wager of five dollars the side was placed upon the bar, and the challenged drinker, a lean and little gaffer, was told the terms of the bet.

"Vait a minute," said he; "an' then I'll tell you wesser I'll try to make good or not."

He was gone from the bar room for a full five minutes. When he returned, an ordinary wash bucket stood ready for him—and not much suds on it, either. The little man acquiesced, threw back his head, raised the bucket with steady hands and then poured its contents down his skinny throat, slowly—and breathlessly.

"Well, said the amazed New Yorker, when the feat was accomplished—and it was only the New Yorker who was panting—"there goes my five-spot. But do you mind telling me why you left the barroom before you made the try?"

"Ach, not a bit," said the phenomenon. "You see, I vork fer this gentleman that bet you. I didn't vant my poss to lose no money on me un', havin' had a good bit o' beer today a'ready, I wasn't quite sure o' my combasity. So"—he wiped a reflective mouth—"I vent over to that ozzer saloon across the road un' had 'em fill me a bucket vis beer there, un' I drunk that—to make sure if I could. Un' I could, all right."

Has this imbiber any equal in Illinois? Illinois is next of Dr. Dubin's list, but with a paltry 6.49. As for the rest of the twenty-six States listed, they follow thus:

Michigan	5.95
Rhode Island	5.87
Montana	5.20
Ohio	5.16
California	5.09
Missouri	4.72
Delaware	3.77
Iowa	3.53
Massachusetts	3.29
New Hampshire	2.71
Indiana	2.49
Florida	2.28
Idaho	2.19
Maine	2.19
Nebraska	1.81
North Dakota	1.45
Tennessee	1.40
Texas	1.35
Oklahoma	1.13
South Carolina	.71
Virginia	.65
North Carolina	.63

* * *

A thought-provoking tabulation! But we should like to know what despot's foot keeps Maryland from being represented. And why do Northerners drink more beer than Southerners? And why is Montana so far ahead of North Dakota? They say we have become a standardized Nation. Can the point be maintained when we see that the average citizen of Wisconsin downs twenty steins to every one consumed by a normal Tarheel—if you will permit the adjective in that connection?

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

GOOD morning ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience: We again present to you Mrs. Diebenkorper, whose periodical talks on "Our Government, Your Government and Mine," have come to be quite a feature on this program. Mrs. Diebenkorper:

Good morning, my friends of the air: There has long been the realization on the part of students such as are engaged in our Government, your Government and mine, that this country is too big, too unwieldly to be administered by one head. If you will take a map in hand, even the map in the geography of your little child, you will see the vast shadow of our country with its diversified interests, habits of people, culture and pursuits of life.

BARGERON.

In our earlier days when we were but a pioneer nation it was manifestly the thing to do to have but one head over all. But ah, my friends, a nation of 130,000,000 people is vastly different from one of say 20,000,000 or 50,000,000.

* * * *

As far back as the earlier part of the nineteenth century the necessity of dividing this country in two was being realized by the keener students of government. But who is there now to defend the division that was subsequently sought to be workedd out—in 1861-65?

It is not a criticism that we students of the present day say this plan was immature, that it was not the proper division at all. With the information at hand in those days our planners undoubtedly did as well as could be expected.

The proposed division at that time was based upon geographical lines. That is a division, as we students of our Government, of your Government and mine, see it today, based upon geographical prejudices which as we were later to learn, were not to obtain for long.

One can readily appreciate that a division today based upon the prejudice veins of our national stratum would make a most lop-sided, crazy division, indeed. In innumerable instances the dividing lines would cross themselves coming back.

* * * *

Since those years long ago, our Government, your Government and mine, has acquired and had placed at its disposal much more amplified data bearing upon the subject. Our charts and graphs have been brought right up to date, our scientific instruments are of the best obtainable.

Might I say, too, that the students who have been brought into our Government, your Government and mine, are the last word in students. Not only are they better equipped than the students of any previous government, but they have more capacious mentalities.

* * * *

Scarcely a finger was turned toward solving this time-old problem by the last Administration. But our present new deal Government, your new deal Government and mine, promised to solve everything and everything it intends to solve.

In the matter of dividing the country in two, the solution to which we have come seems amazingly simple when stated. The division should obviously be along natural lines, not along such false lines as the sponsors of the Civil War planned, or those which some Marylanders have wanted to follow in lopping the Eastern shore from the rest of the State.

The division we have planned really already exists. It has existed, our studies show, since the beginning of time. Why it has not been apparent to the naked eye ere this is a phase in which we intend to pursue our studies. Howsoever, it is there.

What we plan now is simply to recognize an established fact, to recognize the division that has always existed between the husbands and the wives. And for administrative purposes Mr. Roosevelt will be President of the husbands, and Mrs. Roosevelt President of the wives.

One of the first beneficial results that we expect from this set-up is the elimination of the practice of some men in taking three and four wives for their income-tax exemption and casting them aside after the return has been made. Either this loophole in the income tax laws may be plugged or some form of processing-tax benefit for the cast-off wives may be devised. This is the stage of planning at which we have now arrived.

Virginia Waits $797,000 U. S. School Loan

Federal Officials Extend Tentative Approval to Aid for Teachers.

Richmond, April 16 (AP).—William A. Smith, Virginia emergency relief administrator, said today that tentative approval had been given by Federal officials to an application for $797,000 to be used for salaries of teachers in the State.

The money would be used to insure an eight-month term in all Virginia communities.

Documents in the office of Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, which show the needs of the State's school system, will be studied by Federal Emergency Relief Administration officials before a final decision is made, Mr. Smith said.

Under the present plan, the money would be applied to the salaries of teachers who have no other means of support. Teachers not in that category can not receive any of it, Mr. Smith said.

The audit was made at the request of the commission and since it was begun two inspectors of the commission have been relieved of duty, Gov. Peery has announced. Discrepancies in their accountings of oyster tax receipts were said to be the cause.

Second Citizen—No, what?

First Citizen—There's a run on it!

Second Citizen—Good heavens! Every drop of liquor I have in the world is in it. How about you?

First Citizen—I drew out some last week, but they've still got two or three cases of mine.

Second Citizen (indignantly)—The crooks! A man works and slaves all his life to put away a little liquor and then they rob him of it. Let's go down and see what's doing.

* * * *

Scene II—In front of the bank.

Bank Official (trying to pacify the crowd)—I urge you to be calm. Don't lose your heads! I assure you this bank is absolutely liquid.

First Citizen—I'll say it is!

Bank Official—Every quart you deposited with this institution is as good as gold.

Second Citizen—Just about!

Bank Official—I tell you this bank is as strong as any institution in the city. It is 100 proof!

(The crowd mutters angrily. Suddenly a prominent citizen fights his way through it and mounts the steps to make a speech.)

Newcomer—My friends, to show you that I have perfect confidence in this bank I am putting in ten cases of prewar Scotch! And just as soon as I can arrange it I am going to put in a barrel of brandy! That's what I think of this institution!

* * * *

Bank Official—Thank you, Mr. Muggleberry. Now, ladies and gentlemen, I also want to have you know that the bank examiner is here. He has been looking over our deposits. He has been in our vaults all morning and I want you to hear a word from him.

(The bank examiner suddenly comes out of the doorway.)

(The examiner stares at the mob.)

Bank Official—Speak to them!

Voices—Say something! Say something!

Bank Official—Go ahead and say something, please!

Fable of a Court Fool and a Girl's Second Mate

By Robert Quillen

In one of the ancient kingdoms, the king's fool married a working girl who believed in sex equality. That is to say, she believed herself entitled to all rights enjoyed by males, plus all privileges enjoyed by females.

The king's fool, as your know, got his living by thinking up wisecracks to amuse the king.

When his wits were working well, he said things that made the king guffaw, and then his pockets were full of gold coins. When his wits were dull, his sayings were duds, and he was lucky to ge 2 bits a week.

His average was high, however, and he had money in the bank when he and the working girl married.

In some respects the fool was like the typical American of our day. Having been dominated by women all his life, both at home and in school, he let them have their way with argument and called his meekness chivalry.

The working girl took charge of his bank account and his chariot and astonished the neighbors by her ability to spend money.

The fool made no complaint, for he was busy thinking up wisecracks, anyway; but soon the working girl began to nag at him because he didn't make enough money.

The more she nagged, the more he tore his hair and worried; the more he worried, the duller his wisecracks became, and the duller his wisecracks the less money he made.

At last the working girl could stand it no longer. She called on the national wise man, whose business it was to select suitable mates for the unhappily married.

The wise man heard her story and told her to come in next Saturday and get her new husband.

Saturday came and the working girl appeared at the wise man's office dressed in bridal finery. When she saw the new offering, she screamed.

"It looks like a mule," she cried.

"It is a mule," said the wise man. "A mule is the only domestic animal that seems to work for you just as well when you treat him rough."

Stuttering and Stammering.

Although I am a not a physician, and am quite ignorant of physiology, never having studied it since I was a boy in the Hartford High School, I will present my readers with the following gratuitous and unsolicited information. I have known many young people, who were suffering from stammering, stuttering, or some speech impediment; and I have always endeavored to cheer them by telling them that eventually they will be entirely cured; either they will die and then they will no longer be bothered, for in the langauage of William Cowper's great hymn.

When this poor, lisping, stammering tongue
Lies silent in the grave,

Or, they will grow old; and then the trouble, like so many other troubles, will disappear with advancing years. For I maintain that stuttering is largely a boyish or adolescent phase; how very seldom do we hear an old man stutter!

Incidentally, why is stuttering so much more common among boys than among girls? Is it the Adam's apple, or is it part of the general clumsiness, awkwardness, and tanglefoot nature of boys as compared with the relative smoothativity of girls?

One young man saw an advertisement of a cure for stuttering, where it was guaranteed that after six months any sufferer could pronounce distinctly this sentence: "He stretched a stout, strong string across the street." He took the course; and a friend meeting him six months later, asked him if he could really say it. "Yes, but it is surprising how seldom that phrase comes up in conversation."

Now I can recommend an admirable, practical book on all speech impediments. This book is called "Abnormal Speech—Its Cause, Prevention and Treatment." The author is Carl Winkler, and the work is printed by the Wilson H. Lee Co., of New Haven, Conn. The author believes the difficulty is largely psychological, and he attacks the trouble at its origin. His motto is a good one for all emergencies, whether of speech or anything else:

A calm mind is a victorious mind.

An excellent work for speakers and singers and indeed for the general public, is "The Human Voice, Its Care and Development," by Leon Felderman, M. D. (Henry Holt). This goes into the whole physiology of the subject, discussing not only diseases, but fatigue.

I will make one more contribution to the subject. Why is it that a speaker or singer, though he may be very powerful, is unable to shout or sing loudly for half an hour continuously, whereas a baby can yell at the top of its lungs all night long and in the morning, be as fresh as a daisy?

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

"THE one revolution we don't talk about at our dinner-tables," said Frank Simonds the other day in the New York Herald-Tribune magazine, is the revolt of youth. If and when it comes, he believes it will push aside Old and New Deal alike.

Not thinking quite so far, Miss Viola Ilma puts it on other terms. In a slim little volume, "And Now, Youth!" (Ballou, $1.50), this dark, serious-faced young lady of 24 speaks out for the generation under 30. She it was who founded the magazine Modern Youth in January, 1933, and edited it throughout its life of six months. On the basis of 20,000 manuscripts written by the young people of the country which she read, and with the background of several thousand interviews with all kinds and conditions of youth, she maintains that her voice is representative. No one can gainsay her passion and sincerity.

THEO. HALL.

* * * *

"What is the heritage of the young who face this new era? Have we been cheated? We have—not because any one wished to deprive us of a right to both life and opportunity, but because the system which had been erected collapsed on the economic side in the great depression and on the political side in the great war. * * * A beginning must be made with the economic reconstruction of society." That is as close as she comes to speaking of revolution.

She scorns any notion that American youth will go Fascist or Communist. Instead, she offers what she calls "national democracy"—"a reign of co-operation between the individual, to whom is conceded the privilege of developing a Nation economically, and the state, which makes the concession in the interests of the general group."

That, in spite of further explanation she gives, I find nicely vague and Utopian. Not so Miss Ilma. "With this plan in mind, is there any doubt that Roosevelt is the leader to whom youth should turn? * * * He is warring on ruthless individualism * * * he is bravely facing the armies of reaction * * * he has given a measure of life which is qualitative as well as quantitative * * * Roosevelt is a young man's President." No, Mr. Simonds, youth seems still to have faith in the New Deal.

* * * *

Miss Ilma finds that youth is determined to make international peace a reality. For youth alone, she sees, has the vitality to accomplish what the fathers failed in. "A trip through Europe went far to prove that fact. She will not approve Hitler wholly, but she recognizes the strength he draws from young Germany. As to Italy, "we are not interested here in the ethics of Fascism, but it is a splendid example of the power in dormant youth."

And yet in America as in Europe, "youth is surging in restless discontent, disillusioned with the past and sceptical of the future."

* * * *

Why is this? Miss Ilma has a great deal to say about the bitterness of the young. Is is no easy matter to call it the wailing of weaklings and dismiss it from consideration. For a whole generation can not be weak. And Miss Ilma speaks for a multitude when she says: "The disruption of cherished ideals, the futility of effort, the terrible discouragement of facing a blank wall of indifference, the unbelieving despair of watching hitherto respected figures scrambling madly for themselves and to hell with consequences—these are the things flung into youth's face."

And when she is less rhetorical, she is even more forceful. "There is no place," she says quietly, "for the college graduate in America today." And in this sentence she puts more than you will see in a dozen novels: "The youth of today are unemployed and are unable to carry out any moral obligations which the Anglo-Saxon heritage has handed down."

* * * *

Yet it is a passionate idealism which she cries for, an idealism taking the traditional conventions of work and marriage and service and building with them an even better world. "Abundant work can be done to make life richer and fuller. Here is a task for the American youth to undertake with its mind as well as its heart."

Is there no one who will not say "Amen?"

Canning Co-Op Brings Profit For Farmers

Virginia Venture Proves Success in First Year of Life.

Blacksburg, Va., April 16 (Spl.). Left without a market for their tomatoes as the result of both tomato canneries in the territory ceasing operations, the farmers of Little Meadows, in eastern Montgomery County, Va., decided that the only way in which they could have a cannery would be to build one themselves.

The idea developed in the spring of 1933. The group obtained a charter for the Little Meadows Cooperative Cannery, under the cooperative marketing act, and drew up an agreement among themselves to deliver all the tomatoes they produced to the cannery. They also agreed to pay a membership fee of $10, payable, either in cash, building materials for the cannery, or labor in putting up the cannery. They decided to close the membership books in April in order to complete the plans for the cannery. When the books were closed 26 members had signed.

Materials Chipped in.

One-half acre of well located land was purchased and plans for the building revealed an experienced worker in the group who knew how to design a building for efficient operation. It was found that some members could supply lumber, and that others in the community would let them have materials with the promise of payment in the fall when the tomatoes were sold.

A few members with ready cash bought pieces of equipment, such as the boiler, steam engine and and water pump, and other special canning equipment.

Many of the members advanced cash to buy these materials and had their names placed on the books for payment in the fall. Under the direction of their experienced manager, W. J. Cherry, many of the members worked together to put up the two-story cannery building, approximately 30 by 40 feet, with a concrete floor.

They bought a steam boiler from a junk dealer and put new flue pipes in it. They also drilled a 52-foot well with a section of railroad rail. In addition, they built the equipment for handling the tomatoes through the plant.

Families Went to Work.

The plant was ready for operation the first week of August, when the tomatoes began ripening. When the cooperative was ready to start canning operations, the women and older girls from the families of the members were engaged to peel and pack the tomatoes. Members also were engaged to do the heavy work around the plant and the work was distributed in proportion to the volume of tomatoes each member delivered. The canning operations thus became a real community activity.

Everyone was paid the NRA wage scale for cannery workers and each family received as much or more labor income as they would have received if they had done the canning at home. After the returns were all in from the sale of ten cars of tomatoes, this is what the accounts showed:

Good Profit Realized.

The canning plant and equipment costing $893 had been paid for out of the membership fees and a levy of 8 cents on every bushel of tomatoes taken into the plant. The cooperative group had paid for the cans, cartons, labor, management, sales expenses and all other operating costs, and had enough left in the treasury to pay the members twice the cannery code price of 31½ cents per bushel. After paying the members for their tomatoes inn cash, there was still enough money in the treasury in the spring of 1934 to buy a car of fertilizer to advance to members.

The membership of the cooperative has expanded to 42 farmers, who will raise all the tomatoes that the plant can handle this fall.

'Brain Trust Plot' Goes on Air This Morning—Other Radio News and Comment

WHEN "Old Bill," that lovable character drawn by Bruce Bairnsfather in his comic World War sketches, found himself flung into a shellhole after a "frontal attack," his pals used to dance around the rim of the hole chanting: "Don't go down the mine, daddy."

Imperturbable as he was, this rankled "Bill" and his walrus mustaches twitched with rage.

We suggest another appropriate ditty which might be chanted as the "Brain Trust Plot" goes on the air this morning at 10 o'clock over Columbia. Here 'tis:

"Hail to thee, blithe spirit;
Bird thou never 'WIRT.'"

It's from Shelly's "Ode to a Skylark" . . . remember . . . and might very well have been part of the conversation at that famous dinner party in Virginia.

Resumption of the hearings will feature testimony of members of the party from whom Dr. William A. Wirt, Gary, Ind., educator, asserts he received his inspiration.

A WISE old college professor once told us that most people think of places and nationalities they've never seen in terms of stereotypes. Which means that you picture the typical Frenchman wearing a cropped beard, flashing a monocle in his eye and falling all over himself to be polite. Middle-aged Germans—in your mind's eye—always drink beer and cry "Hoch!" . . . while Britishers inevitably drink Scotch and soda and think you are "terribly right."

So what do you suppose some of your favorite radio stars look like and act? Alexander Woollcott might be a fussy and pestiferous old gaffer . . . but he isn't. Mrs. George T. Pennyfeather might be as gushing as she sounds . . . but she isn't. Off the air Mrs. Pennyfeather (Mrs. Thomason) is as quietly housewifey as Aunt Madge who lives on Thomas Circle. But there's one exception. Jimmie Durante, whom we recently observed in his dressing room at the Fox, is as goofy as he sounds.

Edward MacHugh, "the sweet singer of Dundee," is one of New England's most sought after concert artists, National publicity writers say. They tell you everything about him. But they don't mention his wavy hair. They say, for example, that MacHugh is the world's champion marathon singer . . . that he warbles 195 ballads and gospel songs for a total of 780 numbers a month or 10,140 a year!

"Somehow I can't stop singing," says MacHugh. "The more I sing the more I am asked to sing."

Not in the same boat with the fellow everybody laughed at when he sat down to play, eh, Edward?

MacHugh began his rise to fame singing "God Save the King" before the Royal Hunt Club in Montreal with a Black Watch band at the age of 17. The duchess heard him (wife of the governor general) and she was struck by the youth's clear, true tones. So she did a Queen Isabella and MacHugh was made. Then he arrived in Boston after further warbling for the gray-beards at the Royal College of London.

But they don't say much about his wavy hair. Sought-after singers usually have blue eyes and broad shoulders . . . so McHugh, you're labeled in the mind's eye of listeners . . . even if you have straight black hair and stand 5 feet 5.

JULIETTA BURNETT, who adds the charm of her blonde hair and blue eyes, as well as her voice, to Harry Salter's Choir, heard with the Hudson Vocalians in a new series just inaugurated over a National network Tuesdays at 8:30 p. m.

"LOLITA," that studio parrot over at WJSV, has paid the price of adulation.

Afternoons when announcers yawn and pick up transmitters like baseball bats, "Lolita" leaves off preening her green coat and athwart Harold Gray's thumb accompanies the boys into a studio with a piano. Harold strikes a chord and the parrot perks its head and sings . . . sings woeful ballads with snappy jazz "breaks." From her stone-like stare you wouldn't think that "Lolita" is emotional but just watch her eyes . . . the orange-colored iris expands and contracts, showing that she loves music.

She says other things, too . . . sotto voce, which is just as well considering parrot morale.

But "Lolita" is in the hospital. She couldn't take it. Eating lead pencils disrupted her digestion . . . and WJSV has lost a good singer.

WRC—"The Child and Outdoor Life," talk by Miss Ella Gardner, Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, 11:15 a. m.; Maxim Pantelieff, basso, 2:45 p. m.; return to air of Eddie and Ralph, former Sisters of the Skillet, 7:30 p. m.; Ed Wynn, 9:30 p. m.

MORTON DOWNEY, after a lengthy vaudeville tour, is back again as a Columbia star. He is heard on his own program Tuesdays at 6:45 p. m. and as master of ceremonies on the Studio Party broadcasts each Saturday at 8 p. m. on the same chain.

SINCE ART GODFREY took to the big time and the joys of commuting between here and New York he has formed the habit of eating his grape fruit on the run . . . and arriving late for his broadcasts over WJSV mornings. There were legitimate excuses . . . so the studio had a phonograph record made of them to save Art embarrassment. They just insert the record when he shows up late.

Yesterday the record was missing. Now they've got to make another record of excuses making excuses for losing the record. And they thrust the following fan letter under Art's face while they were looking for the record:

Arthur Godfrey,
WJSV,
Alexandria, Va.

Dear Mugwump: Well you are not so hot I see. Why don't you give yourself up. If I hadn't heard you sound off yesterday, I would have thought something was hay-wire.

DEVOTED LISTENER.

Quantico, Va.

This is all explained by an inclosure with the letter containing the following item from the only gazette of McCaysville, Ga.:

"The body of Art Godfrey, missing from his home for nearly a month, was found in a narrow ditch near his home."

But all is forgiven. Ann Gillis told Art that Rudy Vallee heard Art's all-night Friday program. Rudy wired after listening in from his automobile during a cross-country tour that Godfrey was coming along. Famous last words: "Local boy makes good." But he doesn't make trains.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

By D. Sam Cox.

Rover Dog Has a Howling Time.

While Blackie was looking over the chicken house from away up in his tree, he saw some bushes shaking, and he strained his eyes to see who was doing it. It was Rover Dog! And what else did he see? Everything! In the garden were long rows of turnips and onions; banks of sweet potatoes, and oh, oh, oh, gums and gums of honey. Blackie was so busy looking at all these good things that he almost forgot about Rover Dog till he heard him howl, and then when he did see him he laughed so hard that he nearly fell out of his tree.

Rover had been so careful not to make any noise in walking, that he had kept his eyes on the ground, and he didn't see a row of black cats that were sittnig upon a shelf over the hen-house door; so when seven full-grown cats dropped down on him it was enough to make him squall. He had come in at an open gate, and he went back the same way, but he had seven cats holding onto him with sharp claws, and he was yelling "How-oo, How-oo, How-oo," just like somebody was kifling him, as he made for the woods.

"Now's my time," said Blackie, and he slipped down his tree and almost flew to the kitchen. Setting on the table was a bucket of honey, and Blackie grabbed it in his mouth and darted out of the door so fast that he made just a black streak. He didn't stop to see what the kitties did to Rover Dog; but just as he jumped the fence he met Jay Bird and told him to fly on and see what sort of a time Rover Dog was having with the kitties, and then to come over to his house and tell him about it.

That night at Blackie's house, after he and Jay Bird got through eating their corn cakes and honey, Jay Bird said: "It was a funny sight, Blackie. After trying to shake the kittens off his back, Rover laid down and wallowed like a donkey. This got the kitties off of him, but as soon as he got back on his feet two of them were right up on his back again. Talk about a howling time! Well, Rover Dog was certainly furnishing such a time for the kitties, for he kept right on howling as he ran. The kitties rode on about as far as from here to the creek, and then they jumped off and ran back. Rover was so sure that the kitties were still after him that he kept right on running till he got home, and he made such a noise jumping the fence that Mrs. Man came out to see what was the matter. Rover wouldn't for the world tell her what he went to Aunt Lindy's for, and so when she asked him what he was running for, and what scratched him up so, he told her he met Blackie Bear out in the woods, and they had a terrible fight. He said that Blackie was the biggest bear in the world, and had scratched him most to death. Mrs. Man was certainly mad, but she was so sorry for Rover that she got some soap and water and washed his head and brushed his hair, and then she rubbed him down with a nice clean towel. Think of it, and Rover had only been over to Aunt Lindy's to eat eggs!"

"Well," said Blackie, "much as I have against Rover Dog, I almost feel sorry for him, for when I remember what Sallie Cat did to me, just by herself, I am sure the seven of them just about finished Rover Dog."

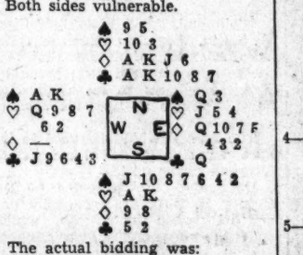
Responding to Partner's Bid.

Mr. Clinton C. Conrad, of Berkeley, Calif., presents an interesting problem in bidding in the hand below. It is interesting not because of its complexity, but because of its very simplicity. In fact, the solution of the problem appears absolutely obvious, but because of the result which followed, it must be not as obvious as it seems. Hence it may well be that there are many Contract players who do not know what to do with a seven-card suit and some outside honor strength after partner has opened the bidding. If this is so, then the question should be cleared up for distributional values ofttimes determine the outcome of a hand, and if a player has not yet learned the lesson of letting distribution fight on his side rather than against him he has not qualified in the ranks of good Contract players. The hand was:

North, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The actual bidding was:

North	East	South	West
1♣	1◇	Pass	1♡
2♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Of course, the bidding as given above is entirely wrong. The hand is played at the wrong contract and the favors showered on North and South by the gods who govern card distribution are entirely disregarded. Here is the correct bidding: (Figure after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1♣	1◇(1)	1♠(2)	Pass(3)
2♣(4)	Pass	4♠(5)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—A very questionable Overcall of the Opening bid when vulnerable. The seven-card suit is the only excuse.

2—Of course, South can not for a moment consider passing his partner's bid. An alternative bid at this point would be three spades or four spades, but inasmuch as partner has opened the bidding and a vulnerable opponent has overcalled, this "One over One" response to the Opening bid practically requires that North afford South a further chance to speak.

3—In the actual bidding West was shown as bidding one heart. If he bids two hearts here, which is a very doubtful Overcall in view of the void in diamonds and the five clubs held by North, it will not be necessary for North to speak on the second round of bidding. North may simply permit the hand to develop further from the South viewpoint.

4—North obediently assures his partner of a further chance to bid. While no Forcing bid has been made, a Forcing situation has been created.

5—While there is an element of danger in this game bid, the chances of its success are much greater than the chance of any loss whatever. South can not further temporize and risk playing the hand short of game.

In the play, regardless of West's Opening, South must fulfill his contract and in fact will make an overtrick against any Opening except a club by West.

Berlin Envoy Tells Troth Of Daughter

Wedding Planned in Fall for Capital Deb of Last Season.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The most interesting news of the day to Capital society is the announcement by the Ambassador of Germany, Dr. Hans Luther, of the engagement of his daughter, Fraulein Gertraud Luther, to Herr Gerritt von Haeften, Attache of the Embassy.

The winsome German miss who came to this country last fall with her father and her younger sister, Fraulein Eva Marie, was a popular figure in Capital society during the several months she spent here, and before her return to Germany early in March, had made many friends in Washington, not only among the younger set, but among the older groups.

The engagement was announced at a dinner given Sunday night by Prof. and Mrs. Edmund Koerner at their home in Essen, Germany, and several days ago, Fraulein Gertraud with Frau Koerner was entertained at a dinner in Pottsdam, where they had been visiting Gen. von Haeften, uncle of Herr von Haeften.

Visited in United States.

Fraulein Luther has made her home with Prof. and Frau Koerner since the death of her mother ten years ago.

Prof. and Frau Koener accompanied the Ambassador and his daughters to this country in the fall and made a trip with the young girls to the West Coast in the early winter. Fraulein Gertraud was presented to society at a small dance given in the Embassy by her father in December, and just before she departed for Germany, the Ambassador entertained at a large farewell reception for her and for Frau Koerner. She was educated at the Victoria School in Essen from which she received a degree and later studied philosophy at Bonn.

Herr von Haeften is the only son of the late Herr Gustav Enno Ernst von Haeften, former German Minister to Colombia, and of Frau Elli von Haeften, of Weimar, Theringia.

Fiance Now in Germany.

He received his early education in Weimar, where he made his home with an uncle, Gen. von Haeften, while his father was in the foreign service. Later he studied law at universities in Naples, Goettingen and Berlin. He entered the Foreign Office in 1928 and came to Washington as Attache of Embassy in 1931.

Herr von Haeften is now on leave in Germany and, though no definite plans have been made, the wedding will take place in Washington probably in the early autumn.

It is the first engagement announced in diplomatic circles this season, and the wedding next fall will be one of the high spots of the social season.

Wedding Rites At Worthington Home Advanced

Daughter Becomes Bride of Mr. Luke One Week Before Date Set.

Washington society was surprised to learn of the marriage of Miss Marion Worthington, daughter of Mrs. Ralph Worthington, to Mr. Adam Keith Luke, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Keith Luke, which took place last Saturday, one week ahead of the date originally planned. Owing to illness in the family the invitations for an elaborate wedding, to have taken place in the gardens at Bay Terrace, Miami, Fla., the home of the bride's mother, next Saturday, were recalled.

The ceremony was performed in St. Stephen's Church, Coconut Grove, Fla., with the Rev. Dr. Benjamin W. Soper officiating in the presence of immediate relatives. The church was decorated with Easter lilies.

The bride, who was escorted to the altar by her brother, Mr. Ralph Worthington 3d, and given in marriage by her mother, wore a gown of old ivory satin fashioned with long sleeves, a high neckline and a long train finished with triple box-pleated tulle. Her veil was attached to a cap of rare old duchess lace.

Mrs. Gustavo S. de Bustamente, of New York, a sister of the bridegroom, was the matron of honor and only attendant. She wore a tailored gown of yellow taffeta with a wide-brimmed crownless hat to match and carried an arm bouquet of Easter lilies.

Mr. Adam Keith Luke, father of the bridegroom, was best man.

After the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the home of the bride's mother on a terrace overlooking the swimming pool after which Mr. and Mrs. Luke left by airplane for Havana to board a ship for California and Honolulu, via the Panama Canal.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. Ralph Worthington, whose family has been identified with the social and financial life of Cleveland for many generations. Her mother was formerly Miss Ethel Burdette, of Valdosta, Ga., who has made her home in Washington since Mr. Worthington's death.

The bride was educated at Mount Vernon Seminary in Washington, and Ogontz School, Philadelphia, and later spent a year in Europe, where she attended Princess Mestchersky School in Paris. She was presented to society by her mother at a tea dance at the Sulgrave Club in December and is a member of the Junior League of Washington.

Mr. Luke, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Keith Luke, of Devon Hall, Irvington-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., is a graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy and Yale University.

Club Born to Help Soldiers Forget Civil War Still Lives

Essayons Theater Unit Offers Play Friday at Fort Humphreys.

In the hectic winter of 1863-64 a group of officers of the Army of the Potomac found few spare moments between combats with their gray-clad brothers and country mud.

These few precious moments were so golden, and yet weighed so heavily upon their hands, that something had to be done about it; something that would draw a merciful curtain over the horrors of the past day and the fears of tomorrow. So this energetic group of "sappers" of Grant's army, who were on duty at Brandy Station, Va., started a military theatrical organization which they called the "Essayons" (meaning in French "let us try") Dramatic Club. They gave plays at the Essayons Theater and had concerts by the Essayons Orchestra.

The club was designed to fill in time here and there and to furnish amusement for perhaps one or two months, but its run stretched out to a year, and that year might well be envied by a Broadway producer.

Revival in 1922.

Thriving and untouched by the passage of time, the club now lays claim to being one of the oldest if not the oldest Little Theater group in this country.

At the close of the Civil War the Essayons moved from Virginia to Willetts Point in New York, where each offering was eagerly received. After several years and many new members the little club made another move, this time to Washington Barracks, which was then the Engineer post.

In the years between there have been several interruptions when it was not practicable to have the meetings and performances, but the Essayons Club is back once more in Virginia, near its birthplace. It was awakened in 1922, after having lain dormant for several seasons by a group of officers stationed at Fort Humphreys. Their leader was Lieut. Alfred Ashcroft, who had had four years in the Cornell Dramatic Club under the direction of Prof. Alexander M. Drummond. The productions that year were "The Drums of Oudh," and "Behind the Beyond."

It is a far cry from that first little theater of the Essayons Club, a mere shed of timbers, to the ultra-modern brick and stone theater in which the performances are now given.

"Enter Madame" Friday.

Friday evening the club will present the three-act comedy, "Enter Madame," at the post theater at Fort Humphreys. This play was a great success on the professional stage. The cast includes Mrs. Frank Fries, who, assisted by Mrs. Charles Cunningham, also directed the play; Mrs. Charles Curran, Mrs. Philip Kromer, Lieut. Col. John R. D. Matheson, Miss Alice Spalding, Mr. Donald Matheson, Miss Millicent Ward, Lieut. Charles Curran, Capt. Robert Gill, Lieut. Phillip Kromer and Lieut. Chester Harding. Settings and scenery have been designed and constructed by Capt. Henry M. Underwood.

This, the club's last production of the season, will be by far the most elaborate one in many years. It is expected that the performance on Friday will play to a large audience composed of the members of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and civilian circles in Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia as well as the garrison personnel.

Trick Counter Delights Those Prone to Joke

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT'S a tricky discovery. A counter that's truly a jokester's delight.

It has hundreds of oddities, including celluloid ears, glass teeth ana a rubber lady that does an oriental dance after she's wound up.

Puzzle balls and squares defy one to take them apart and put them together again. It can be done, though.

A large beer glass has both the music and the words to the German drinking song, "Schnitzelbank," on the outside. A perfect set-up to a round of beer and a round of song.

One of the most amusing is the "funny fly"—a most realistic glass insect on a long pin. Directions for use depend largely on one's sense of humor. It can be stuck into the butter.

Another small box contains another lot of pills. One of these in a lighted cigarette produces a regular snow storm. Disconcerting, maybe.

One package contains some metal plates that sound like breaking glass if they be dropped on the floor. To be used as the spirit prompts.

* * * *

Odd and Handy.

An odd but handy set incorporates a bowl with fruit and cocktail cups. The bowl is arranged with a deep niche to hold any of the accompanying glasses and still leaves room for the crushed ice.

* * * *

Breath of Lavender.

A coarse-grained powder with a lavender scent both perfumes and softens the bath.

It was only recently put on the market, and so far is not widely known; but it will answer the need of many discriminating women.

The preparation is made from lavender flowers, health-giving cereals and special water-softening ingredients. It comes in a large, attractively designed natural-wood box or it may be purchased in a sample package, with three cakes of lavender soap.

* * * *

Slip Into a Bargain.

When silk slips sell for a dollar, it's really a gala occasion. And such it is in a downtown store.

White and tea-rose slips, from size 34 to 44, are selling for this unusual price now. They were cut to fit, and have shadow-proof panels.

* * * *

Open Up and See.

Florentine candy dishes are pretty enough as they are. But they're even more tempting after they're opened up. For there tucked away inside is a small hors d'oeuvre or candy dish, with floral design. And the price is but half a dollar.

* * * *

Fluffy and Protective.

The jet black jar is a selling point. But the cream inside is another.

It was made from the purest ingredients and stirred to a fluffy creaminess. There are a great number of women who do not realize how essential it is to protect the face, as well as care for it in other ways. This cream does the work, is a protective vanishing cream, with cleansing properties.

In morning or afternoon before applying make-up simply rub a little of it over the face. Remove it with a soft tissue, and then pat on the powder. The rest of the day is taken care of—as far as repowdering is concerned. For, while protecting the face from wind and sun, it keeps the powder on smoothly and evenly.

* * * *

To Pep a Party.

A small but important party item is the place card holder. It can add to the fun, be a complete nonenity, or decidedly detract. That depends largely on the hostess' ingenuity.

If she is a practiced shopper she will have no trouble in finding some of the unusual holders in an art street shop. Once she sees them she will recognize what decided attributes they will be to her party.

Some of them are made from exquisitely wrought milk crystal bows, looking as though they were tied.

Others are tiny flower pots molded from silver glass. Each one contains a tiny cluster of bright glass tulips.

* * * *

Knitting Center.

There's a good reason why a local store should be known as the center of knitting and needle-point activities. It not only has a wide variety of yarns and knitting patterns, but needlepoint galore. Some new patterns came in the other day. Colored designs are already worked in, and only the background is left to complete. Some are for chairs, stools and benches, others for bags and pillows. All of them are worked on the French, Austrian and Spanish tapestries.

Baked Ham, Potatoes and Onions Favorite Stand-Bys.

By Ann Barrett.

FIT FOR a king? Certainly. And what's more, he'd get them ever so often, too—if the queen did the cooking! Nice, homey, work-saving dishes of meat and vegetables baked together for a delicious blend of flavors you can get no other way. Casserole of ham for one of the kings of the air, Eddie Rickenbacker. Casserole of chicken for Albert H. Wiggin, of banking fame. Lamb chops for screen star, Sylvia Sidney.

And pork chops, veal chops, hamburg steak, liver, fish, also. Each one combined with the right starchy ingredient such as potatoes, rice, spaghetti or noodles. With the right juicy vegetable such as tomatoes, onions, celery. With liquid (when the dish needs it) such as milk, white sauce, gravy, tomato juice or tomato sauce. And then this just-right combination baked slowly in a moderate oven (not over 350 F.).

Baked Ham, Potatoes, Onions.

Baked ham, potatoes and onions make one of the best of these old, stand-by dishes that should be in every woman's bag of tricks. Here's how: Put an inch or inch-and-a-half slice of smoked ham (about 2 pounds) in a shallow dish or pan, cover with warm water and let stand about 1 hour. Then drain off water and cut ham in individual pieces. Then fit these pieces together again in a shallow baking dish. Next put over the meat 3 cups of thinly sliced raw potato and 2 cups thinly sliced raw onion. Then melt 2 tablespoons butter in a saucepan, blend in 2 tablespoons flour, slowly stir in 3 cups milk and cook till thickened. Add ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper. Pour this sauce over meat and vegetables and bake in moderate oven (350 F.) about one hour.

Lamp Chops in Casserole.

Here's how to turn the trick with lamb chops (shoulder chops cheapest and just as good for this dish). Buy six of them cut about ¾ inch thick. Sear these quickly on both sides in a hot, ungreased skillet. Then lay them on top of 1¼ cups sliced raw carrots and 1¼ cups sliced raw onions in a large, deep casserole. Next cover the chops with the same amount of vegetables and sprinkle with ½ teaspoon salt.

Then pour over 1 cup strained tomato juice combined with 1 cup stock or bouillon; and drop into the casserole 1 clove garlic, ½-inch piece of bayleaf, ½ teaspoon marjoram, 6 whole black peppers (these seasoners first tied up in a piece of muslin). Add enough hot water (if necessary) to barely cover vegetables. Then cover the casserole and bake 45 minutes at 350 F. Next add 2½ cups sliced raw potatoes sprinkled with ½ teaspoon salt. Add enough more hot water again to barely cover vegetables. Cover the casserole and bake 45 minutes more at 350 F. Then remove the muslin bag and thicken liquid with 3 tablespoons flour mixed with 4 tablespoons cold water. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve.

Liver With Vegetables Another Nutritious Economy.

Baked Liver and Vegetables.

If you haven't tried liver in this kind of dish, you've got pleasure ahead of you. Chart your course this way: Get 1½ or 2 pounds beef liver sliced about ½ inch thick. Cover with boiling water, let stand 5 minutes, then drain. Then sprinkle with ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper, roll in flour, and brown quickly in about 2 tablespoons fat.

Meanwhile cook 6 small potatoes (sliced thickly), 1 cup onions and 2 cups carrots (sliced thickly) all together in boiling water to cover about 15 minutes. Then put these vegetables in a casserole. Thicken the water they were cooked in (2¼ to 3 cups) with 2 tablespoons flour mixed with 2 tablespoons cold water. Add 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon chopped celery leaves, and pour this sauce over vegetables. Then put browned liver on top, add hot water (if necessary) to barely cover liver. Cover dish and bake at 350 F. about one hour.

Send for More Recipes.

Another type of popular wholemeal dish is the meat and vegetable combination—topped with a crust—that is welcomed as meat pie. My newly revised bulletin "Juicy Meat Pies and Crusts" gives a round dozen good recipes. Several kinds of chicken pie, pork pie, beefsteak and kidney pie, veal and ham pie, cornmeal crust, English meat-pie-pastry and others. Coat Dresses and Redingotes Becoming to Larger Women

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, April 16.—With all the publicity there's been about the "Mae West" silhouette, Mrs. Heavier-Than-Average might feel inclined to pat herself on the back and say, "Now aren't you glad you didn't diet!" But even with curves and rounded contours fashionable, the large woman still needs to watch her clothes step so she won't look bulgy instead of smoothly curved.

There are three excellent dress types—fashionable for any size—which fit especially well into the large woman's fashion picture.

One is the coat-dress, that neatly tailored type which fastens, or seems to fasten, in the manner of a coat. And you know what nice long, straight vertical lines it gives to the figure.

Another is the redingote . . . much in spring fashion. Either a real one, with printed dress and separate plain coat which doesn't quite meet at the lower front, allowing the print of the dress to show . . . or the simulated redingote, with a strip of print inserted down the front and trimming the neckline.

As you see in the sketch, this print, showing between the plain edges, is one of those devices which carry the eye up and down the figure instead of across, emphasizing height rather than width. The print for the large woman, should be a small pattern and closely spaced.

The third type is the jacket dress with the jacket cut on straight-hanging, boxy lines. These straight lines conceal wayward width, helping to balance any difference between the size of bust, waist and hips.

The length of such a jacket depends on the height of the figure. For average height finger-tip length is almost always right. Shorter than average should shorten this length else the figure will seem cut off at the bottom.

Simple sleeves with a slight fullness at about the elbows but fitting below, help minimize width across the hips when the arms are down. And the smart, straight skirts with flat-pleated fullness are recommended for their height-adding, width-subtracting lines.

Dresses of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

What Today Means

"Aries."

If April 17 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., from 3 to 5 p. m. and from 6 to 8 p.m., The danger periods are from 8 to 10 a. m., from 2 to 3 p. m. and from 9 to 11 p. m.

In your social contacts on this date it is very likely you will meet a very "catty" female. Display good judgment by not letting her upset your equilibrium, but do your best to rub her fur the right way, and there is every probability she will purr instead of trying to scratch off you self-esteem. Have any important business transaction put in black and white, as a verbal understanding might lead to complications.

If April 17 is your birthday, you have every qualification essential for leadership, both in the social as well as busines world. Educational advantages are very essential for those born on this date. If you have not already been fortunate enough to have had them, it is possible by study and careful selection of your associates to acquire sufficient knowledge to counteract that defect.

The child born on April 17, as it grows older, will display the ability of taking care of itself. At a very early age it will have very definite ideas of its own, and be extremely independent of the opinions of others. This spirit should be encouraged, for it is the sort that ultimately develops into a strong character with an individuality all its own.

The man born on April 17 should be very circumspect in business negotiations, especially with strangers. Rather temperamental, guard against letting personal likes or dislikes influence your actions, or your business affairs may react unfavorably. It you respond to offers of friendship and devote a little more time to social affairs, life will be a great deal more pleasant.

BACHELOR—of ARTS

By John Erskine

The Story So Far.

When Alec Hamilton returned to Columbia for his sophomore year, he felt himself a much wiser man. Most of his wisdom had been gleaned from women. Gladys, the college widow, had taught him that even a gold digger can be shaken off—when there is no more gold to dig. Betty Whistle, of Binghamton, had revealed the dangers of hammock sitting, even when one is at heart, faithful to another. But red-haired Mimi, with whom he had fallen in love at first sight, had given him a purpose in life and a reason for growing up. Mimi was a straight shooter. Almost as soon as she had entered college her father had lost his money. Instead of going home to St. Louis, she had got a job as cashier in a drug store. Alec wanted to marry her immediately, but had to abandon the plan for lack of funds. Another obstacle was Woolsey, the bachelor professor, who was also in love with Mimi, and already had an education and a job.

Mimi wanted Alec to be a great man. It had occurred to him that perhaps getting on the football team would be a good start. So he cut short his summer vacation and rushed back to college to try for the scrub. He made it somehwow only to conclude that being in training meant a kind of a slavery-hard work, study, whether you felt like it or not, and no glory worth the mention, while Woolsey and the other fellows were left free to court Mimi. The football season passes.

"Shut the door," said Alec, "or they'll hear me downstairs."

"Man" cried Tom, "they hear you all the way to the Bronx!"

"But I can't learn without practicing, can I?"

"Why, asked Albert, "don't you do it in your room in the dormitory?"

"It comes through the walls there."

"It would come through Gibraltar!" Tom assured him. "Why don't you give it up?"

"Tom pretended to feel in his pockets. "How much will buy you off?"

"Ah, I'm serious! I know what I'm doing, and it's hard enough without your butting in!"

"Open that door wider for air," advised Tom. Albert pushed it back with his foot. "You were saying," continued Tom.

In disgust Alec picked up his saxophone and his book. "If you two are here for the night, I can't work!"

Tom caught him by a leg. "Get back to your trunk there and tell us wnat it's about."

"I want to learn the sax and play in a jazz band like Wall's. I'd like to earn my living, too."

"It's a dog's life," said Albert sympathetically. "Wall's been at it since he was born—learned the clarinet in Arizona, where there's plenty of room. Now he's up all night, five nights out of seven, and he loves a dance the way a cook loves washing dishes."

Tom Interrupts.

Tom interrupted. "This desire for sudden wealth—has it anything to do with Mimi?"

"You may shut up" said Alec, with battle in his eye.

Tom shrugged his shoulders. "Is it an insult if I imply you want to marry her? Will you take it in the right spirit if I inquire further whether she has heard you play? Much as women want wealth, some of them are squeamish about how it's accumulated."

Albert feared an explosion. "Quit ragging him! The way I look at it, he's musical, all right, but the sax just isn't his instrument."

"What is, then?" asked Alec, deflated yet not hopeless. "I took the best part of this month's allowance to pay the first installment, but I dare say they'd let me exchange it for whatever is right."

"Have you a voice?"

"Are you deaf?"

"I mean, can you sing?"

"Not alone," Alec admitted, "but I usually join in."

"You're a born singer," encouraged Albert, "and from the way you talk you might be a tenor. In that case, of course, you'd be worth your weight in gold."

Alec was doubtful. "Doesn't a voice have to be trained?"

Tom cut in. "You lay your hands on your stomach, you draw in your chin, you shake your shoulders and say 'Ah!' Advance students say 'Mee-mah-mee-mah!' But even then the neighbors like it better than saxophone practice."

Albert got off the floor and tried to throw Tom downstairs. "Don't mind him! You join the glee club and begin with the rehearsals and a concert or two in the suburbs, and as soon as you're good enough come out for the chapel choir—that pays your tuition, you know; it's only a few minutes a day, and you get extra for a funeral."

Pushed Down Stairs.

Tom came back up the staircase. "The faculty's old, but you shouldn't count on windfalls!"

Albert pushed him downstairs again, then turned once more to the perplexed sophomore. "Forget the sax! Who wants to lug around a heavy thing like that anyway? A singer can just open his mouth and there you are! We're rehearsing tomorrow night under the chapel."

It was several weeks before he told Mimi about it. He intended to wait until he had actually sung money into his pocket, but the day he got the two letters from his parents and permission from the glee club leader to sing at the Hackensack concert he felt an urge to purchase shaving materials.

Like an ordinary customer, he stood in line and put down his quarter, his soul in his eyes, being face to face with her. She had been watching him from the moment he came in the door, but she kept her soul under control.

"Why, hello, there!" She pretended to be surprised.

"I was just out of soap," he explained.

In the slow course of nature the other customers paid their bills and went their way.

"I didn't know it," he confided, "but I'm a tenor."

She stared, smileless. "You mean you are now going to sing?"

"Sure!"

"Why?"

"Why would anybody sing?" he countered, amazed.

"Oh, I know why others would," she answered pleasantly, "but I wondered what was your reason."

He made it clear. "I'm on the glee club. I expect to get into the chapel choir. Then I can sing at faculty funerals."

She laughed so suddenly that the clerks across the store looked up. "Alec! There never was anyone like you!"

"You Ought to Sing."

Since he declined to join in the laughter she resumed a reasonable gravity.

"You oughtn't to sing unless your voice is trained."

"Don't I know that?" he asked triumphantly. "The best ones spoil easiest. That's what I wrote my father. All I need is a few lessons from a good teacher to start me off. Once I got the principles I could do the rest myself."

"Did he send the money?" asked Mimi, driving at the main point.

Alec rubbed the back of his head. "He must have had an awful grouch that morning. He filled two pages saying things about an uncle of mine, not the one that left me the legacy, but a brother of mother's. He had a gift for music, and father always had to pay his bills. The old man says he doesn't believe I have a voice, but if I have, it explains my behavior."

"If you can't take lessons," she persisted, "you oughtn't to sing."

He was happy to correct her. "But mother sent me fifty. She's a dear! She says she always hoped I'd inherit her brother's talent, and the lessons will do me good culturally."

Mimi's eyes narrowed at him. "I'd be interested to know what you spent the fifty for."

"Gosh, but you can be mean!"

She laughed.

"It's in the bank, every cent of it!" he went on. "Five good lessons. The glee club leader told me of a first-rater who charges only ten."

Three customers interrupted. When they were gone he spoke in a tone of still deeper confidence.

"I wish I could swap a saxophone for a tailcoat. I've a tuck, of course, but for a concert you need tails."

She turned cool. "So you've been buying a saxophone!"

UPPER-CLASS ITALIANS are responding enthusiastically to Premier Mussolini's campaign for larger families.

While in America the number of children is usually in inverse ratio to the size of the pocketbook, in Italy large families are being found in palaces as well as in cottages. Such would the report on the Italian birth rate, as given by Signora Margherita Sarfatti, indicate.

Signora Sarfatti, reputed to be the most influential woman in Italy, is on a tour of the United States to study economic conditions, and is now staying in Washington at the Mayflower Hotel.

"The Duce encourages large families," she said, "because he feels the future welfare of Italy rests, to a large extent, on increasing the population of the white race.

"Not long ago," she continued, "a contest was conducted by the Italian government to discover the mother who had borne the most children in a certain number of years. A marchesa, who had 17 children, won the contest."

While Signora Sarfatti realizes women of her country are different in their ideas and aims from American women, she was lavish in her praise of the latter.

"America has reason to be especially proud of her women writers, such as Willa Cather, Edna Ferber and Fannie Hurst," she said. "I have also found Katherine Mayo's books interesting. And of course America's outstanding women journalists have international repute. I admire them very much. In fact, judging from the ones I have known, I would say that most women of the United States are attractive, ambitious and competent."

She was also enthusiastic about the President and the First Lady, whom she visited at the White House Sunday evening.

"I was amazed to learn," she said, "that President Roosevelt has such a wide knowledge of international affairs. I was particularly interested in talking with him about our Italian frontier, with which he showed surprising familiarity. I enjoyed every minute I talked with him. He is one of the most fascinating men I have ever met. I found his wife charming also."

An outstanding literary figure in Italy, Signora Sarfatti has written "Dux," the biography of Mussolini, which has been translated into many languages, and has sold over a million copies—300,000 of which were bought in Japan alone.

D. A. R.s to Hear Mountain Girls

When the Children of the American Revolution meet for their thirty-ninth annual convention at the Red Cross Building this morning, they will have as their guests two little mountain girls who are students at the Tennessee Industrial School in South Carolina.

The two girls, Pear Cantrill and Pearl Carpenter, are representative of the five girls who hold scholarships provided by the Children of the American Revolution at the Tennessee school, which was established by the D. A. R. for the education of underprivileged mountain children. They will tell of their training at this school.

The Children of the American Revolution was founded 35 years ago by Mrs. Daniel Lothrop, author of "The Five Little Peppers and How They Grew" and other books for girls, who felt that children should be educated in the principles of patriotism while they were still impressionable. The members range in age from 10 to 21.

Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, National president of the organization, will address the meeting at the opening session, and will make the annual report.

Ex-Patient Credits Nurse For Successful Recovery

Mrs. Jewett Is So Appreciative That Nurse Lloyd Lives With Her Now in the Old Jewett Home in Jefferson Place.

DOCTORS ARE A GREAT help, but it is nurses who deserve most of the credit for bringing patients successfully through severe illnesses, believes Mrs. Richard Dickinson Jewett, 73-year-old member of a family long prominent in Washington.

So appreciative was Mrs. Jewett of the care given her last winter by Nurse Myrtle Estelle Lloyd during a pneumonia attack, that she has asked Miss Lloyd to remain with her always. In the old Jewett home in Jefferson place, the nurse has a large, sunny room, filled with gifts from her beloved "second mother" as she refers to her former patient.

Miss Lloyd comes and goes as she wishes now Mrs. Jewett has recovered from her illness. But the two women enjoy each other's companionship so much they spend several hours together each day. Every afternoon they go for a drive. A few minutes before 4 o'clock the chauffeur stops the car in front of the Treasury Building and Miss Lloyd leaves her benefactress to serve as acting nurse in the Treasury's emergency room until 11:30 p. m. She has arranged to leave her Government position for several months this summer so she can be with Mrs. Jewett at the Jewett summer home on the Hudson.

Miss Lloyd has been with the United States Public Health Service since 1931. Until last fall she was stationed at the Public Health Hospital in Pittsburgh. Then she returned to Washington. While she was waiting for an appointment in the Capital a call came to Garfield Memorial Hospital for a nurse to take care of Mrs. Jewett. The call was referred to Miss Lloyd, who had taken her training at Garfield.

"At first I refused to consider the case," said the nurse yesterday in her cozy room at the Jewett home. "I had made up my mind I did not want to do private duty again."

But when the second call came Miss Lloyd decided to accept. And it is to her Mrs. Jewett gives most of the credit for her recovery from a grave case of pneumonia.

"No matter how fine a doctor is, he can't do a patient much good unless there is a skilfull nurse to carry out his directions," declared Mrs. Jewett yesterday. She was sitting on a rose-colored lounge near a window that looked out upon quiet Jefferson place. "And my dear N. S. N. was so cheerful and sympathetic during my illness that I didn't want her to leave me when I got well."

"N. S. N.," she explained, is a pet term she and Miss Lloyd have for each other.

When Mrs. Jewett discovered her nurse was also sad at the thought of parting, arrangements were made for her to stay on.

Now as the two women visit back and forth in the old Jewett home they talk on the newest member in the Jewett family, 3-week-old Richard William Dickinson Jewett, jr., Mrs. Jewett's grandson.

Him.

By Katherine Smith.

His eyes are brown and narrowing,
His smile is gay and bright;
His hair is black and deepening
With shadows. With delight
I make a mental negative,
And if the print is dim
It doesn't matter, for I dream
The whole night long of him.

Archery Held Healthy Sport

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

Archery for years was condemned to a dull life among the croquet balls and fluttering ribbons of our grandmothers. Brought out of retirement in the last few years, to the rank of an actual, full-blooded sport, it is now the cause of strong contention in women's colleges.

The majority of colleges include archery on their sports programs. And in the colleges, especially among physical education teachers, you are either an archery or a volley ball addict. Archery induces poise, a good stance and a quiet control, its advocates say. Every movement in volley ball helps to develop good posture, whereas archery gives an exaggerated emphasis to one side of the body, says the other side. Back to the attack; archery not only builds the muscles for good posture, but teaches one control while standing still—a more difficult thing than smooth movement.

ARCHERY is no longer the sport of beribboned dainty ladies as it was in the Mauve Decade days. Athletic college girls have taken it up in a more forceful manner. Those partial to it vehemently proclaim its merits as far superior to such sports as volley ball.

Secret Eludes Us.

BEING a press page for the D. A. R. Congress must be a much more important and fascinating job than it appears to a casual world.

• • • •

One press page—Beatrice Aitchison, daughter of the U. S. Commerce Commissioner and Mrs. Clyde Aitchison—has her doctor of philosophy degree in higher mathematics. As she flourished a dust cloth energetically, she modestly admitted to having won this important degree and said she "liked being a press page; it was lots of fun."

So what price higher mathematics?

• • • •

Still another Press Page found the occupation so enthralling and the honor of being chosen for such a position so great that even matrimony didn't deter her from fulfilling her job.

• • • •

It leaked out at the opening session yesterday that on April 6 Miss Charlie Griggs, of this city, was married at Clarendon, Va., to Lieut. Comdr. Miles R. Browning. Instead of going to Niagara Falls or Atlantic City, or even wandering around hand-in-hand among the cherry blossoms at the Tidal Basin, where is Mrs. Browning spending her earliest days of married bliss?

• • • •

Batons Distributed.

THE D. A. R. paid the leaders of the three service bands in town a special compliment at the opening session yesterday morning. Mrs. Russell W. Magna, the president general, who had triumphantly made her grand entrance at this session behind a huge shower of violets—which nearly hid most of her lovely Alice blue gown, her favorite shade—presented each of the three leaders with a baton on which was a personal inscription.

• • • • •

Capt. William J. Stannard, the sedate, white-haired leader of the Army Band, received a baton made of wood from the elm at Cambridge under which George Washington is said to have stood when assuming command of the Continental Army.

Capt. Stannard used this baton for the first time in his Family Hour program broadcast over WMAL hook-up of the National Broadcasting Co. last night when he conducted the hymn, "Blessed Be the Tie That Binds."

• • • •

Red-headed, genial Capt. Taylor Branson, of the Marine Band, and Lieut. Charles Benter, the dark-haired gigantic leader of the Navy Band, received similar batons, the history of which will be checked up at the earliest opportunity and given in these columns.

Spring Story.

WITH THE URGE for spring shopping developed along with the openng cherry blossoms to the epidemic stage, two wives of two graduates of the U. S. Naval Academy of '26 accompanied their spouses to Washington one day last week bound to secure some new finery.

They parked the Packard at one of the most convenient parking stations and the ladies left on their errands of supporting the NRA program. The husbands went their own way. The foursome was to reassemble at the station at 2 p. m.

• • • •

Two thirty came and no wives. The ladies admitted they knew what the time was, but—"August will surely wait for us. He knows I'm always late," said one of the ladies—Mrs. August Lentz. Young Mr. Lentz, bald-headed but genial, being one of those completely American husbands—and a heavyweight champion when in the Navy and captain of the Navy football team in 1926—she was sure he'd wait.

So the ladies went on shopping.

• • • •

At last, at 3 p. m., triumphant and very weary, Mrs. Lentz and her companion arrived at the parking station. They immediately inquired as to the two husbands and the Packard.

Smiles Help Immigrants, Says Manual Originator

CORDIALLY welcomed, properly educated, the immigrant becomes a patriot to rival the native born, according to Mrs. John Laidlaw Buel, author of the Immigrant's Manual.

A CORDIAL SMILE and a helping hand go a long way toward making the immigrant a good American citizen. Follow this by teaching him what is expected of him here. If he is of desirable caliber he will not only want to learn, but will soon rival the native born in patriotism and loyalty to this country.

This opinion was expressed yesterday by Mrs. John Laidlaw Buel, of Litchfield, Conn., originator of the famous Immigrant's Manual, in an interview at the D. A. R. headquarters. Mrs. Buel's work in the interest of immigrants extends over a quarter of a century and her widely circulated handbook on citizenship has contributed much toward the happiness and progress of foreign-born Americans.

Popular Manual

With Mrs. Buel at the helm as editor and published, the Immigrant's Manual was issued for the first time in 1920 as a National D. A. R. project. It is now published in English and 17 foreign languages, and is distributed at the rate of 350,000 a year.

What prompted the idea in the first place? Mrs. Buel puts it this way:

"To a certain extent, it was placing ourselves in the immigrants shoes. What is the first thing any human being would like to see when landing on foreign soil? Why, a friend, of course; one who spoke his language, and could explain the customs and conditions of a strange country to him.

"This is what the manual proposed to do. Printed in the language of every foreign immigrant, the little book greets him as soon as he lands, in the tongue he understands. Replete with information at once valuable and instructive, it again takes the place of a friend, in getting him acquainted with the country."

In 1909 with Mrs. Buel, a college graduate of literary inclinations, as editor, the chapter issued a "Guide Book of the United States." Containing information which would enable the foreigner to adjust himself more easily after landing here, the little book was distributed freely among prospective citizens throughout the State. It was published in four foreign languages, as well as English.

Why not give all foreigners the benefit of such easily acquired and valuable instruction? Surely it would facilitate his somewhat halting steps along the road to citizenship. These were the thoughts which Mrs. George Maynard Minor carried from her Connecticut chapter, into the president general's chair when she was elected in 1920.

National Committee.

It wasn't long before she appointed a National committee to prepare the work. She knew where to look for the chairman and editor. Mrs. Buel, patriotically accepted the mammoth task of compiling and distributing the new book.

The present manual is modeled upon the Connecticut Guide, but arranged upon a more comprehensive plan. Financed by a quota of chapter contributions, the book is distributed free to immigrants as soon as they enter the United States.

World Slipping Towards War, Author Holds

Only Armed Neutrality Can Keep America Out of Next Conflict.

Only a state of armed neutrality can keep America out of the fast-approaching next world war, according to Lothrop Stoddard, author of "The Revolt Against Civilization," "The Rising Tide of Color" and other volumes.

In his address to members of the Woman's National Democratic Club at their forum luncheon yesterday, Mr. Stoddard pointed out that the struggle for the supremacy of the Far East now beginning between Russia and Japan, and the continued fight for the balance of power in Europe trend inevitably toward war. He then outlined a constructive plan of neutrality for America when the next war is declared.

"No people should be involved in a war unless their vital interests are concerned," he declared, "and a practical, not a theoretical program of neutrality is necessary for America."

"The first step toward preserving a neutral policy during the next war would be to forbid the exportation of munitions to either side," he said. "But if our financial interests make this impossible, then all munitions and contraband of war should be sold f. o. b. at the buyer's risk, and should not be shipped on ships flying the American flag.

"The second step would be to forbid American citizens traveling on foreign ships, and to declare that the United States Government would not become involved in any controversy as the result of the death or seizure of an American citizen who failed to obey this ordinance."

"The greatest protection to the Western Hemisphere would be a Pan-American League of Armed Neutrality. Against such a barrier the warring countries would be helpless."

Mrs. Basil B. Manley introduced the speaker.

That Blank-Canvass Feeling Fades With Music, Says Artist

NEW YORK, April 16 (Spl.).—Hum at your work as much as you want to; turn on the radio full blast and listen to an orchestra while you are waiting for the inspiration that won't come.

Such is the advice of Mrs. Carol Harrison, painter, who has introduced music as an aid to concentration in her classes in creative design at the Cooper Union Art School.

Since the playing of phonograph music was introduced in the classes the students produce better work with less effort, according to Mrs. Harrison. Compositions by Bach, Chopin, Mozart, Liszt and other masters are played during the class period. In the laboratory period that follows the students play whatever selections they desire.

"It must be simple and clear in theme and design," she said. "Rondos, mazurkas, minuets and folksongs seem to be the most inspiring. Music is especially good for the initial creative work, because at that time it is important to establish a sense of rhythm."

A survey of 90 students in one of the design classes revealed that nearly all of them found great assistance in music when facing their blank canvases. Only three found the music disturbing.

The students are not expected to interpret the music in their work. Its function, Mrs. Harrison points out, is "to produce a happy environment that stimulates the imagination, awakens the creative spirit and makes concentration easier."

Singing or humming at one's work is a natural form of expression, Mrs. Harrison believes, and has persisted because it has been found to aid creativeness. It helps to blot out external influences, she believes, and to concentrate the mind of the worker on the problem before him.

Haitian Chief Arrives Here Amid Fanfare

Confers With President Today Seeking Financial Control Revision.

By Kendall Foss.

Top hats, a brass band, a Marine guard, a troop of Cavalry and President Roosevelt's No. 1 limousine were waiting at Union Station yesterday afternoon to do honor to Haiti's bronzed and grizzled President, Stenio Vincent.

Arriving from New York, where he had spent a fortnight discussing with bankers ways and means of liberalizing the American financial control of his island home, President Vincent will spend the better part of today closeted with President Roosevelt, presumably on the same subject.

Accompanied by Secretary of State Hull, the Haitian went straight to the Mayflower Hotel, where he spent the evening quietly. He will go to the White House at 10:30 this morning to meet President Roosevelt and to be guest of honor at a stag luncheon in the state dining room. After the meal he and his host plan to retire for an afternoon discussion.

Welles' Guest at Dinner.

In the evening the visitor will be entertained by Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles at dinner at the latter's home.

Tomorrow, President Vincent will lunch at the Pan-American Union, visit Mount Vernon, lay a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, attend a reception in his honor at the home of James Clement Dunn, special assistant to Secretary Hull, and dine at the Haitian Legation. He will return to New York on the midnight train to sail for Port-au-Prince on Thursday.

The lengthy discussion scheduled for this afternoon indicates much ground must be covered before it will be possible to determine what modifications are in store for Haiti's financial set-up.

Regulations Eased.

In 1915, when most of Haiti's foreign indebtedness was held in France and was in default, the United States, perhaps seeking to avoid the possibility of intervention, negotiated a treaty with Haiti. The treaty provided for the floating of $23,000,000 worth of bonds in this country with which to pay off all outstanding foreign obligations. American supervision of Haitian affairs was agreed to as a guarantee to investors.

By the protocol of 1919, the Haitian loan law of 1922 and the executive agreement between the two presidents last August 7, the original supervision has been progressively whittled down. More and more independence has been accorded Haiti until now there remains only a financial controller in charge of customs and U. S. Marine officers in charge of the Haitian guard.

The Marines are due to retire October 1, when the Haitianization of the guard should be complete, and the financial controller is to retire when the bonds are discharged, in 1944, according to the present rate of amortization. There remain $11,000,000 to be paid.

In an exchange of notes with President Roosevelt last November, President Vincent urged withdrawal of the financial control on the grounds Haiti had hung up a perfect record for payments since 1915. He indicated restoration of complete sovereignty would be welcomed.

President Roosevelt, in reply, regretted his inability to modify the control further, pointing out he could not in fairness to the bondholders relax the supervision which constituted the guarantee undertaken by this Government. He suggested, however, that if Haiti could arrange to refund its obligations with a new loan not guaranteed by this Government, he would be only too glad to lend his good offices. This step would further reduce the Caribbean responsibilities this Government is anxious to slough off.

Leger Plan Considered.

Indications are that President Vincent found Wall street unreceptive to a refunding operation, but perhaps inclined to examine the so-called Leger plan, worked out by a Port-au-Prince attorney.

Leger proposes the Bank of Haiti, owned by the National City Bank, be named financial controller in place of Sidney de LaRue. Under the treaty the controller is nominated by the President of the United States but appointed by the President of Haiti. There would, on the face of it, be nothing to stop President Roosevelt nominating the bank since it is American owned.

Hope is held out that if this arrangement would satisfy the wish for a fuller sovereignty it may prove feasible.

The last Latin-American president to visit the White House was Dr. Harmodio Arias of Panama. After private discussion of various phases of the relations between the Panama governments and the Canal Zone administration, President Arias returned home well satisfied with his trip.

Wheat Experts Study Method To Cut Surplus

Action to Make Excess Crop Unfit for Human Use Proposed.

Rome, April 16 (AP).—World wheat experts closed their offensive against untoward market conditions today with discussions of surplus-removing schemes to supplement a history-making minimum export price project.

They agreed that a plan for making wheat unfit for human use should be recommended to the 15 governments represented on the world wheat advisory commission, but found they lacked time to draw up an international agreement in the matter.

The question of how much flour should be allowed to be extracted from the cereal also was studied but, in the hurry to ajourn tomorrow, the experts decided the proposal must be taken up again at a later meeting in London.

The purpose of denaturization is to remove low grade wheat from competition with better grades. The suggestion was made that a bushel of wheat dyed blue be mixed with 19 bushels of poor quality, uncolored wheat. This would prevent it from being made into flour, but it could be fed to poultry.

The commission considered tests said to indicate the value of wheat for cattle and hog food.

Meanwhile, a report on suggested minimum prices was being prepared for the various governments, which will be asked to announce their stand before the commission reassembles in London.

Frederick E. Murphy, of Minneapolis, urged that wheat countries reinforce their methods of restricting acreage.

The address apparently was accorded support of other delegates, who decided to place on the agenda of a commission meeting in June a survey of crop reduction efforts.

Mme. Saito Lauds Cherry Fete Ideals

Eleanor Roosevelt, Queen of Festival, Praises Peace Gesture.

Linking the United States and Japan in friendship, the Japanese cherry blossoms bring the ideals of Nippon and the samurai to America in the spring, Mme. Hirosi Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, said during a special broadcast in behalf of the first annual cherry blossom festival yesterday.

She spoke ou a program with Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, queen of the cherry blossoms and daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy. Mme. Saito presented the Oriental version of the cherry blossoms, while Miss Roosevelt paid tribute to them from the American point of view.

"This is an especially happy season for me and for all the Japanese in the city," said Mme. Saito. "It carries us back to our homeland where the coming of the flower of flowers is celebrated in a similarly joyous manner. We also rejoice to watch our American friends throng to the mirror-like Tidal Basin and enjoy the transplanted flowers from our native country."

Mark of Friendship.

Mme. Saito declared the trees were a lasting mark of friendship between the East and West, which is being strengthened year by year.

Miss Roosevelt paid tribute to the beauty of the blossoms, and reviewed the history of their planting 25 years ago.

"In that time we have seen the population of the globe turn from pursuits of peace and happiness and put themselves at each other's throats in the mad struggle for supremacy," said Miss Roosevelt.

"More recently, the nations of the world have gone through another kind of crisis—an economic upset, almost as serious in its results as was the crisis of the war.

"But now again we are on the road to peace and happiness, and what is perhaps more important, the mental attitude of the people is one that reflects peace and happiness.

"In assuming the role of Queen of the Cherry Blossoms," Miss Roosevelt continued: "I felt pride and happiness because I could in that way serve best the Capital of the country I love, and do my part in inducing more people to enjoy the National pageantry that is theirs."

500,000 Visitors Expected.

Cool weather and rain which fell yesterday morning further delayed the cherry blossoms from reaching the height of their bloom. Meanwhile Washington made ready to entertain 500,000 visitors who are expected to arrive for the festival Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Sunday an army of 150,000 thronged the streets of the city and crowded the Tidal Basin, where the buds were more than 60 per cent at their best. Predictions for rain at least one day during the festival failed to interfere with completion of plans for the fete.

The parade committee announced 30 floats were definitely in the line of march for the grand review Friday and the second parade Saturday evening before the ball and reception at the Mayflower Hotel.

Floats entered include Betsy Ross and the Birth of the American Flag, George Washington and the Cherry Tree, Washington at Mount Vernon, Dolly Madison Serving Ice Cream in the White House, Perry in Japan, Development of Railroads, Development of the Typewriter, Japan Presenting the Cherry Trees to Uncle Sam, Pioneers of '49, Development of the Street Railways, Evolution of the Rifle, Host of the Nation, Spirit of Washington, Prize Babies, Lincoln Memorial and Cherry Blossoms, East Meets West, Development of the Automobile, Peace and Prosperity, Coal Mine, Minute Men of '34, Spring Flowers, Conservation Float, Conclave of Nations, Liberty Bell, Ben Franklin, Rushmore Memorial and Capt. John Smith Landing in Anacostia.

Peace, war, beer and sausage floats have been barred from the parade, it was announced yesterday by Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, chairman of the parade committee and grand marshal of the review.

His statement came after Mrs. Frank Frost, of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, complained that peace floats were barred. Officials replied all propaganda floats were "out."

Gotwals Urges Wider F Street For 2-Way Lane From 7th to 9th

Pending Plan Calls for Cropping of Frontage at Patent Office.

The elimination of traffic congestion on F street, between Seventh and Ninth streets northwest, by widening the thoroughfare, was strongly urged last night by Engineer Commissioner John C. Gotwals. Should the proposal be accomplished, it will mean that the city's busiest thoroughfare will be enabled to carry two-way through traffic.

A plan pending before the Fine Arts and the National Capital Park and Planning Commissions would provide the necessary traffic space by a slight alteration in the south entrance to the old Patent Office Building. The cost of the alteration would be approximately $75,000.

The plan embraces the removal of the steps of the old building so that the sidewalk would be flush with the columns of the portico. Entry would be made through doors under the portico. Should this plan be approved, it will provide 32 feet of traffic space on the north side of F street.

Commissioner Gotwals' opinion that the street should be widened is shared by Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and George E. Allen. Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer believes that adoption of the plan will materially lessen the traffic congestion in that area. The cost would be approximately $30,000, it is estimated by the Highway Department.

Civic associations, including the Board of Trade, the Merchants and Manufacturers Association and the Chamber of Commerce, have been urging this improvement for more than a year. They argued that the city's most heavily traveled highway should have two-way traffic, and that the present arrangement only aggravates traffic conditions.

Under the present arrangement, F street in front of the old Patent Office Buildings is for eastbound traffic only. The autoist driving west is compelled to turn either north or south on Seventh street and circle the block, with additional traffic lights impeding his way. This system of handlinig the traffic causes snarls at both Seventh and Ninth streets, and adds to the confusion of motorists and street cars in the adjoining streets.

Those favoring the widening program point out that F, Seventh and Ninth streets are the commercial thoroughfares of the city and they should be linked so that traffic may be permitted to flow to and from all of them. The plan would not only benefit the merchants on these thoroughfares, but would aid the movement of street cars and speed up street car service, which is impeded now by the turns in the east and west bound car tracks.

The present bend in F street was caused by the improper placement of Government structures, built many years ago when there was no fixed scheme of city planning. The old Patent Office was erected on a site which was inadequate, and the result was that the north line of F street was pushed south to make room for the structure.

The south line was extended to make room for the traffic demands of that day, but with the development of electric traction and the automobile, the space became inadequate. The plan would make F street a two-way thoroughfare from the Treasury to the Union Station.

Speeding Up of Busiest Thoroughfare Would Cost $105,000.

School Children to Take Questionnaires Home.

First Lady Backs Move in Hope of Cutting Retail Price.

Aimed at discouraging the proposed curtailment of milk supplies, a survey of the consumption of dairy products in Washington homes will start in the District tomorrow, through the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and with the aid and indorsement of Mrs. Roosevelt.

As Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday asked public suport of the survey, a special committee, headed by Mrs. Harvey Wiley, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, and a committee of three, met at the Y. W. C. A. and later appeared before Assistant Superintendent of Schools Robert Haycock for permission to circulate a six-question questionnaire among representative types of school children. The permission will be given formally by the Board of Education when it meets tomorrow.

Mrs. Wiley's committee includes Mrs. Bernard Hearn, chairman of the living costs committee of the League of Women Voters; Mrs. Howe Warner, representing the American Association of University Women, and Mrs. Lucian Jordan, representing the Parent-Teacher Association.

Survey in 50 Cities.

The survey is being carried on under the direction of the Department of Agriculture in 50 cities throughout the Nation. Mrs. Roosevelt, at a White House press conference yesterday, explained that the survey was undertaken at the request of Mrs. Edward Costigan and Mrs. Ellis Meridith because of the underconsumption of milk in schools and preschool children throughout the country.

"I think that the implication of such a survey will be far reaching," asserted Mrs. Roosevelt. "The survey will help us estimate the situation."

Mrs. Wiley yesterday said that the questionnairies would be circulated to three representative groups of school children. One will be in an extremely poor school, another in a middle-class school and the third will be from a school attended by the children of well-to-do parents.

Will Seek Amount Used.

The questions to be asked are how many members in the household are served meals regularly, how much money is spent weekly for food, how many members of the family are under 5 years old, 16 years old or older and between 5 and 16; how many quarts of milk were purchased last week, how many pounds of butter and pints of heavy cream, medium cream and light cream; how many cans of evaporated milk were bought, how many quarts of milk were received from relief sources and what the weekly income of the family is.

Seven hundred and fifty copies of the questionnaire will be distributed. The aid of principals whose schools are selected will be invaluable, Mrs. Wiley pointed out.

"We wish to keep the survey entirely anonymous. There will be no names signed to the questionnaires. Our goal is neither to annoy people nor take up their time. We seek valuable and essential information, which may lead to a bettering of conditions everywhere."

Low Farm Prices Pointed Out.

In her statement yesterday Mrs. Roosevelt pointed out that the farmers have been getting as low as 1½ cents to 3 cents a quart for milk which retails for 15 and 18 cents a quart in the cities.

"I would like to see the scaling down of the price of milk to the consumer and the raising of the price for the farmer," said the First Lady. "I would like to see real interest aroused in the value of all dairy products for children."

Mrs. Roosevelt put herself on record as anxious for the continuance of the nursery schools in the District.

"I think the nursery school is the keynote to all future education," stated Mrs. Roosevelt. "It has a double value in education of mothers as well as children, and is an aid in establishing habits of education and help.

"We now find people stressing the lack of character teaching in our educational systems. The nursery schools stress character-building through the teaching of obedience, courage and industry.

"One of the values of these schools is that they comprise a way to secure the cooperation of parents. Character teaching must be done at home as well as at school. These schools give parents a real insight into child psychology from a moral, mental and physical point of view."

Wins Prizes, But Takes Machine

'Claw' Machine Test Up Today; Two Accused

Police, Taking Fight Into Court, Warn Further Seizures Due.

The district attorney's office fired its opening gun in the drive against "claw" machines yesterday, ordered two devices seized and prepared to present a "test" case in Police Court this morning with two restaurant proprietors as defendants.

William W. Wakefield and James S. Jawish, restaurant owners, were booked at police headquarters on charges of permitting gaming. They posted bonds of $100 each for appearance in court today.

Warns of Seizure.

Meanwhile, Hart warned that all types of "claw" slot devices found in operation will be seized. He pointed out that District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett set yesterday as the "deadline." Various machines throughout the city were marked "temporarily out of order" last night.

Hart accompanied vice squad members when they visited the two restaurants yesterday. By prearrangement the machines were in operation. Lieut. George Little, squad chief, dropped three coins in the machines and obtained three prizes.

Sergt. George C. Deyoe and William McEwen also "played" the machines, unsuccessfully.

Just Lucky, He Says.

"We will present evidence obtained by playing various machines," Hart declared. "In one place I spent $4.50 and obtained prizes valued at not less than $10. However, I happened to be lucky. Others have not fared so well."

Several weeks ago Garnett scored the machines as "apparent gambling devices" and ordered their operations halted after April 15 until a "test" case could be prepared.

The machines operate on the scale of a miniature steam shovel. Prizes are scattered in a pile of candy and when a coin is inserted a "claw" descends into the heap and then ascends. Players charge the prizes are buried in such a fashion as to make removal difficult.

U. S. Archives Board Bill Passes House

$10,000 Job Created in Act; Set-up of Body Named.

Capitol Architect Gets Control of New U. S. Court Building.

A bill to establish a National archives commission to exercise jurisdiction over the $10,000,000 Archives Building now nearing completion was passed yesterday by the House on a consent calendar.

After being amended and then objected to, the bill was recalled later in the afternoon and passed without dissent.

Sponsored by Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), New York, it specifies that the commission shall be composed of the secretaries of each of the executive departments of the Federal Government, the chairmen of the Senate and House Library Committees, the Librarian of Congress, the secretary of the Smithsonian Institution and the United States Archivist.

Object to New Post.

The latter post, a new position paying $10,000 a year, was the object of protests by Representatives Blanton (Democrat), Texas, and Truax (Democrat), Ohio.

During the debate Bloom said that every other large country has an Archives Building and that this Nation has lost many valuable papers in the past because it had no such repository.

Another bill to place the Architect of the Capitol in charge of the United States Supreme Court Building was passed after Blanton has withdrawn his objection. He previously called the building a "monument of extravagance" that would "rest on the shoulders of Congress for the next 100 years."

Building "Too Large."

He said the building is "about four times as large as it should be" and that "2,000 employes could be lost in it."

Another bill passed provides for the reappointment of John C. Merrian as a member of the board of regents of the Smithsonian Institution.

Charles Town, W. Va., April 16 (Spl.).—George Washington Packette, 77, well-known Jefferson County farmer and direct descendant of Samuel Washington, a half-brother by an earlier marriage of George Washington, died this morning at the Charles Town Hospital.

Mr. Packette spent his entire life on his home, Locust Hill, which was originally a part of Harewood, home and burial place of Samuel Washington. His mother, the former Lucy Elizabeth Washington, was the daughter of Samuel Washington. Both she and Mr. Packette's father, John B. Packette, were natives of Jefferson County.

Plan Would Divide School Presidency

Urged to Ease Load on College Head.

Charleston, W. Va., April 16 (Spl.).—A plan to split the duties of president of West Virginia University at Morgantown between that official and a chairman of the graduate council, was proposed at a meeting of the university board of governors here today and taken under consideration.

Under the plan a chairman of the graduate council, which comprises faculty members but now has no chairman, would be appointed to take over direction of academic work and other details of campus activites now handled by the president. The president thus would be given more opportunity to deal with State officials, members of the Legislature, and others.

The Governor refused comment today upon a reported possibility that Dr. John Roscoe Turner, president of the university, will be replaced, but indicated that if any change is made it would not take place for several months or a year.

Entire Sports World Focuses Eyes on Baseball Opening Today

185,000 Are Expected To View First Games; Close Races Forecast

Nats, Giants Favorites; Eight New Managers in Big Leagues.

NEW YORK, April 16 (AP).—Subject to the caprice of spring weather, which ruined today's gala opening schedule in the Nation's Capital, major league baseball will put on its eight-ring show tomorrow, hopeful of bigger and better things for the fifty-ninth organized season of the great American sport.

After two of the most financially disastrous years in the history of professional baseball, accompanied by graver problems than any since the costly Federal League war 20 years ago, all 16 big league clubs have been strengthened for the combined purpose of tightening the pennant races and recapturing public support.

Eight New Managers.

Sweeping changes have been effected. Since last spring, eight new managers have been named, two tail-end clubs have been pulled out of desperate straits by wealthy new owners, Sunday baseball has been legalized in Pennsylvania, a standard ball adopted for both big leagues and Connie Mack has sold all his championship stars to rival teams with the exception of Jimmie Foxx.

The influence of these and other factors calculated to stimulate interest is expected to attract approximately 185,000 fans through the turnstiles tomorrow—weather permitting. It was stormy tonight all along the northeastern seaboard, but clear skies were forecast around New York by game-time and the situation appeared doubtful only in Boston, where the Red Sox hoped to entertain the champion Washington Nationals after being washed out in the Capital today. Fair weather prevailed in the West.

Given more luck in the usual joust with old J. Pluvius, the prospects are that 100,000 will witness the four National League openers in New York, Brooklyn, St. Louis and Cincinnati. Estimates are for an aggregate attendance of 85,000 in the American League games at Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and Cleveland.

Giants Expect 35,000.

The world champion Giants, despite an uninspiring spring training season, expect to open their campaign before the day's biggest crowd, upward of 35,000 at the Polo Ground, and pick up where they left off with their famous southpaw, Carl Hubbell, pitching the first game against the Phillies. In keeping with the occasion, another left-hander, Aldermanic President Bernard Deutsch, will throw out the first ball.

The biggest crowds prediicted, otherwise, are 30,000 each for the invasion of Cincinnati by the Chicago Cubs, where President John A. Heydler, of the National League, will be among the spectators, and the visit of the New York Yankees to the home grounds of the Philadelphia Athletics.

The American League's chief executive, Will Harridge, accompanied the retreat of the Red Sox and Nationals today from Washington to Boston. The game's high commissioner, Kenesaw Mountain Landis, plans to stay at home for the battle between the Detroit Tigers and White Sox at Chicago.

Plenty of Variety.

From the outset, there is plenty of variety in interest for the game's keenest followers. Youth will spark in the line-ups of at least eight clubs as a baker's dozen of rookie stars get their baptism of championship fire. The one and only Babe Ruth, starting his twenty-first season on the home grounds of his successor as home-run king, Jimmie Foxx, appears in shape for a gallant farewell to arms.

The former monarch of National League maulers, Rogers Hornsby, will be seen in the role of an American League player-manager as the starting third baseman of the St. Louis Browns. Mickey Cochrane, the fiery backstop, has steamed up Detroit fans as no one has done since the heyday of Ty Cobb.

The livelier National League ball may prove a real boon to big hitters who have been in a slump, including Chicago's Babe Herman and Brooklyn's Hack Wilson, but it may likewise be a pain to such pitching craftsmen as Hubbell, Schumacher, Dean, Warneke, Cantwell and others who had rival batsmen handcuffed most of last season.

Five Clubs Revamped.

First impressions won't decide the pennant races, but fans will inspect with more than usual interest the revamped line-ups of their favorites, including at least five clubs in each league with championship ambitions lurking somewhere in the background.

The bombardiers of the Yankees, fortified by a sensational new pair of keystone kids, Rolfe and Heffner, are picked to fire the biggest challenge at the Nationals but Cleveland, Detroit, Boston and perhaps Chicago figure to have something to offer in the American League scramble. Even the Athletics and Browns, although generally consigned to the depths, may spring some surprises.

The Giants remain favorites to repeat in the National League, despite some early signs of a crack-up. Until proved otherwise, the balance of pitching power appears in their favor, but experts consider the clouting Chicago Cubs their leading challenger and likewise rate the St. Louis Cardinals, Pittsburgh Pirates and Boston Braves as extremely dangerous. On paper, all five have a chance to win the pennant and the well-known "breaks of the game" probably will decide the issue.

Against such opposition, it is difficult to see how the Brooklyn Dodgers, Cincinnati Reds and Phillies can make any headway but they should wage a merry three-cornered battle to keep out of the cellar.

It's Crosley Field Now —Reds' Owners Honored

Cincinnati, April 16 (AP).—It will be Crosley Field, instead of Redland Field, from now on.

The board of drectors of the Cincinnati National League Baseball Club met today and changed the name of the club's home park, rechristening it in honor of the team's "angel," Powel Crosley, Jr., wealthy Cincinnati manufacturer, now president of the club.

The park has housed the Cincinnati team for 35 years or more. Crosley bought control of the club some months ago and was named president, with Larry Mac Phail, former heal of the Columbus American Association team, as general manager.

President Roosevelt Gets His "Ducat"

Left to right: Mr. Roosevelt, Jimmy, Clark Griffith and Billy Griffith, who took along a pass for Mrs. Roosevelt. President Roosevelt assured the club owner his arm was in fine shape, from the exercise it received on his recent fishing trip, and that he was all set to throw a strike starting the opening Washington game as soon as weather conditions would permit.

Nats to Open In Boston Today

and announced that the opening-game ceremonies had been rescheduled for April 24, when the Red Sox return to Washington for the local opening.

Tonight, the Nats and the Red Six were train mates on the express for Boston along with League President William Harridge and Umpires McGowan and Summers, who were to officiate here.

Rhodes to Start.

Manager Joe Cronin of the Nats is hewing to his pitching program that calls for Earl Whitehill to oppose the Red Sox in the first game, but Manager Bucky Harris of the Red Sox announced a change in the Boston pitching as a result of the postponement here.

Instead of Lefty Bob Weiland, who has been in Washington for two days, resting for his inaugural effort, Harris has nominated Gordon Rhodes to oppose the Nats in the opener.

The right-handed Rhodes, who scaled the pitching heights with the Red Sox last season after being traded by the Yankees, did not accompany the Boston team to Washington, but remained in Boston to prepare for today's game. He is remembered as a particular Nemesis of the Nats last year, when they managed to win three ball games from him during the first month of the season by one-run margins in brilliant pitching duels.

Grove Out a Week.

The awe-inspiring figure of Lefty Grove, the $150,000 purchase of the Red Sox, will hold no fears for the Nats in the four-game series in Boston inasmuch as he is still nursing his sore arm and will be unable to take his regular turn on the mound for at least another week.

With single games in Boston tomorrow and Wednesday and a Patriots' Day double-header on Thursday, Cronin may be forced to start the rookie, Ray Prim, in one of the games of the double bill.

The slow progress of Alvin Crowder in rounding into form has relegated him to relief roles during the first week of the campaign. Weaver is scheduled to follow Whitehill to the mound on Wednesday, with Walter Stewart working one game of the double-header. Cronin's desire to save a right-hander for the opening game in Philadelphia on Friday is expected to result in his withholding Jack Russell from action at the Hub.

Prim or Burke to Hurl.

Thus Ray Prim, the promising rookie, or Bob Burke, the perennial rookie, will take the mound during the Thursday twin bill at the Hub.

Cronin has abandoned hope that the injured Luke Sewell can return to his catching duties within ten days and the catching burden thus will devolve on Moe Berg.

A Rainy Opening Day

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, April 16 (Spl.).—While this department is not in the habit of calling attention to its occasional successes in the prediction line, I can not refrain from alluding to the fact that some four or five weeks ago I advised my clients that if they were patient and well behaved that the snow would disappear, winter would vanish and baseball would return. I will be forgiven, then, if I point with pardonable pride to the fact that the 1934 baseball season opens officially tomorrow afternoon all over the country. The snow is gone, the grass is green, the athletes are in town. Well, that is the kind of service you may expect from this column all the time and at no extra charge. True, as I write this the skies in our city are hanging low over the tall buildings, hiding their tops, and weeping in gray sheets of water. It is bleak and damp and cold and wet. But the season is open. Even to pick up your paper and discover that a game has been called off on account of wet grounds is a relief.

It seems to me that one of the chief uses of baseball the summer long is to provide the citizens with a topic of conversation. The art of small-talk is not at a particularly high level in the United States, and men particularly seem to be at a loss for interesting speech when they gather in the smoking car or the lounge or the bar or the restaurant. If, after they have finished with shop and the weather and the New Deal, one of them will say—"I see where Ruth hit one again today. I guess he's about through, ain't he?" It comes as a great relief. There are two major leagues, eight teams to a league, 23 players to a team. That makes it last a long time.

All of the extensive bookkeeping on baseball, the individual and collective records of teams and players are necessary to feed baseball talk. Personally, I was never very good at it, being more interested in the payers than in what they do. I get more kick out of watching the set of Carl Hubbell's or Hal Schumacher's jaw muscles just before they release the pitch than out of readnig their figures on earned runs permitted. They tell me that Blondy Ryan is a lousey ball player, but he is certainly a great stimulant and he has those queer champions eyes. Terry is a great athlete around first base, a beautifully working machine, the best first baseman I ever saw operate, I think, but the smoldering Bill is much more interesting as a person. He gets people mad at him.

What Frank O'Doul does on paper is dry-as-dust stuff, but what he has to say about the art of hitting a baseball, when, where and how is fascinating stuff. Babe Ruth has compiled probably one of the greatest long distance hitting records ever, but his work with the bat is probably the least interesting thing about the man.

Casey Stengel . . . Casey Stengel . . . What do I seem to remember about a guy named Casey Stengel? He opens the season as manager of the Brooklyns. Wait a minute, don't tell me . . . I seem to see a world series game, a tight pitchers' battle between Sam Jones and Art Nehf, the Yanks versus the Giants. A man with very large, sail-like ears comes up to bat. His name is Casey Stengel. The crowd cheers. Anytime anybody named Casey comes up to bat, the crowd cheers. The score is nothing to nothing and Casey hits a home run, winning the ball game. But that isn't what I seem to remember. What I can not forget is the way Casey ran the bases on that homer. He placed his thumb up to his nose and spread out his fingers in the gesture that is as old and time-honored and well known as the pyramids. And he ran that way while some 70,000 persons watched him. The gesture was Casey's salute to the New York Yankees. That's your Brooklyn manager. Don't you love a guy who can think up something like that and have the nerve to pull it?

Rain, go away, please. I want to go to the ball game, the ball game, the ball game, tra-la-la-la-la-la-la-la-la.

Thought on opening day—the beginning of the season all over the country, and I'll bet not one single ball club anywhere has thought up a single novelty or will do anything differing one iota from what it did last year.

Another idle thought: If this were the old days of paganism, the season would open with the public sacrifice of an umpire.

An idler one: For the first time in years, hand in hand again—baseball and bock beer.

Of course you know just as well as I do what is the matter with this column. I'm sore and disappointed. It's raining, and damp and wet and foggy. I was looking forward to going up to the Polo Grounds, snapping my teeth on a hot dog sheathed in a roll and smothered with mustard, cracking peanuts, drinking beer until it ran out of my ears and abusing the visiting ball players. Opening day is an annual celebration to me. I do it quite thoroughly, sort of the sacred rites of spring. And it's raining. Go on, amuse yourself. I quit trying.

Carpentier and Fumo ni 4-Round Exhibition

Barry Choice To Conquer Kennedy

THE second contest of the Portner's heavyweight elimination tournament will be unveiled tonight, with Donald (Reds) Barry and Les Kennedy promising faster, if not more gruelling, action than marked the first bout of the tourney between Natie Brown and Marty Gallagher. While both contestants are extraordinarily speedy for big men, Barry does not punch hard enough to push the whipped cream off a charlotte russe. Kennedy is not a devastating hitter, but he does strike with enough vim and vigor to wear down some of the best opposition.

In a previous engagement last winter, Kennedy punched holes through Barry to take a unanimous decision. In the interim Kennedy's stock has fluctuated, from a record low to which it nose-dived following knockouts at the hands of Mickey Walker and Walter Neusel into a new high, which it hit following a sizzling draw with Marty Gallagher. Barry has since continued a steady rise toward bigger and better fistic heights, nearing the apex by virtue of wins over Charley Massera and Obie Diah Walker and draws with Lee Ramage and Abe Feldman.

Barry Is Favorite.

Daring Donald, the Darling of the Dashing Detectives, the only fighter ever to be featured in a Dick Tracy type of comic strip, will enter the ring an odds-on favorite. While the local wagering fraternity is laying 7 and 8 to 5 on the Southeast redhead to reverse the decision in tonight's encounter, Barry himself is laying 2 to 1 on himself, which indicates great confidence—if nothing else.

There has been no great scarcity of Kennedy takers, however, as many close observers of affairs fistic are of the opinion that Barry's style is made to order for the transplanted California Clouter. His backers are depending on his strighter and shorter punching to carry him inside of Barry's speedy, looping swings to a decision, or possibly a knockout.

Furr Fights Snyder.

Phil Furr, body-punching welterweight from the Army, will oppose Pug Snyder, stelf-styled champion of the New Jersey National Guard, in a six-round semifinal. In two other sixes, LeRoy Dougan will attempt to tear Johnny McShea to pieces and Bob Lowry will make passes at Larry Jackson.

Around the Ring Selections—Kennedy to decision Barry, Furr to wear down Snyder, Dougan to outrough McShea, Lowry over Jackson and good old Barhoofs to conquest Cook.

Barry Gets Offer To Fight Sharkey

Signing Believed Hinging on Bout Tonight.

The Boston Garden has made an offer for Donald (Reds) Barry, local heavyweight, to meet Jack Sharkey, former heavyweight champion, in the first outdoor match of the Boston season, to be staged in Braves' Field in June, it was learned last night.

The offer, probably the juciest morsel ever dangled before a Washington heavyweight, was made by Billy Ames to Joe Jacobs, who immediately wired Barry's managers to communicate with Boston.

Whether Barry will actually be signed for the bout is believed contingent upon his success against Les Kennedy, a transplanted Californian, whom he meets over the 10-round route at Portner's tonight. The Barry managerial staff will, it is believed, snap at the opportunity, but should its charge fall to trounce Kennedy, who took a unanimous decision from him in a bout last winter, the Boston promoters probably will select another opponent for Sharkey.

New Orleans Held Southern Choice

Today's Four Opening Contests to Draw 50,000.

Atlanta, April 16 (AP).—The Southern Association opens its thirty-fourth annual campaign tomorrow with upward of 50,000 fans expected to witness the starting games in baseball parks at New Orleans, Knoxville, Memphis and Atlanta.

Cheered by reports of increased intake in all types of businesses, the baseball magnates have hopes that a similar increase may be shown at their box offices this season after several years of just breaking even or, in many cases, of financial losses.

The early ballyhoo will have the fans out for the first fortnight or so, and the managers trust that increased strength all down the line will result in a tight race into September that will keep the interest of the paying customers alive.

Tomorrow's schedule sends Birmingham against the defending champions at New Orleans, Nashville against Atlanta in the Georgia capital, Chattanooga against Knoxville in Knoxville and Little Rock against Memphis in Memphis.

Parades, banquets, pep meetings and ticket campaigns have been under way in all the cities in their efforts to win the opening day attendance cups, and Atlanta leaders have even employed the attractions of a burlesque queen to fan interest.

New Orleans enters the race as the outstanding club, with Memphis a step behind. Nashville and Atlanta are other clubs figured as possible contenders for the flag.

6 Long Shots Victorious At Havre

Feature to Silent Shot in a Driving Finish; High Quest 2d.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK, Md., April 16.—A $2 bill, courage to parlay it and enough luck to get aboard some of today's winners would have netted a fortune—and probably did to some few. Even "Sister Bowie," famed for her long-shot parades, probably was hiding her face in shame tonight after a program here today that deserves a place on Maryland's all-time record for surprising results and staggering mutuels. And just when those few customers present were beginning to get the long-shot idea, the seventh race provided a distinct upset when the favorite won.

It is doubtful if it rained harder on the Isle of Pago Pago than it did hereabouts early this morning, and those getting their first look at the course just before post time wondered if the Shenandoah River hadn't been washing over the track. True, the weather cleared in the afternoon, the sun came out, but the damage had been done. The Big Blazer, sometimes referred to as "Old Sol," smiled down on a gooey track, a small crowd and a riddled program, where the Harford County officials had hoped would be a capacity gathering, a fast track and a brilliant assemblage of horseflesh.

Day for Skid Chains.

It was a day for skid chains, and those horses which do their best work on smooth tires were excused for the afternoon.

After warming up with a 5-1 shot in the opener, the splurge of heavy mutuels had not let up for five races, the featured Harford Handicap providing its shock when J. E. Hughes' Silent Shot was the winner in a driving finish. Three parts of a length behind came Mrs. Dodge Sloan's High Quest, with G. W. Ogle's Patchpocket another two lengths away.

The mud-running ability of Silent Shot was known to many of those present, but his condition at this period of the campaign was doubted but the heavy truth was hung on the mutuel board to the tune of a $31.20 pay-off.

In fact, for some four of the six furlongs of the feature Silent Shot showed nothing to indicate that he was ready. As Miney Myerson, the reformed sellling plater Bononza, Character and others battled for the lead, Mattioli was riding Silent Shot a good, or a bad, last. In fact, Silent Shot had only one horse beat as the field approached the final turn. It was High Quest which was doing the principal winning at this period, having just collared the ambitious Patchpocket. But then the shooting commenced. There was no wet powder behind this Silent Shot.

Mattioli went in for whipping and the son of Under Fire went in for running. Down the stretch came this flying horse and this rugged jockey. Silent Shot's hoofs were making no mistakes. In the mucky going he appeared as sure-footed as you or I running on Pennsylvania avenue in a pair of tennis shoes. But the speed was the thing. He slipped past the disappointing Springsteel, now a laboring seventh. He gave the air to Caracao, Bonanza and the now tiring Miney Myerson. And then on to catch the staunch-hearted High Quest with the veteran Johnny Garner making a futile effort to save the race. Silent Shot won going away—no other phrase suits as well as this chartmaker's designation.

The race was run in 1:13 3-5, mighty fine time under the track conditions.

Porter Rides Winner.

Earl Porter lost no time in taking advantage of his opportunity to run up a lead over the suspended Joe Jacobs for the American jockey lead. The Illinois imp piloted Waterset to a 5-length victory in the opening event, the combination returning $12.40, Blue Foam beat Trillium two lengths for the place. Fred Almy, the favorite, never could get close. Waterset, which was a good hunch for the boys with rain falling and the track a sea of mud, led throughout, with Blue Foam never able to threaten.

This was Porter's eighty-sixth score of the year, placing him one up on Jacobs. The latter's suspension, which began the last two days at Bowie, was extended the first three days at this track.

Silvio Coucci's followers had a big inning when the Bronx Express drove Cherokee Sal home in the Florida Counties Get $859,328 Race Taxes

The distribution—$3,625.80 for each of the State's 67 counties—was made by the comptroller's office. It brought to $12,825.80 the amount each county has received from taxes on the 1933-34 season.

George E. Widener Trio, Headed by Chicstraw, to Be Scratched From Derby

Stable Star Far Back in Training

Unfavorable Weather Is Blamed by Trainer Jack Joyner.

Field Still Holds Plenty of Potential Champs for May 5 Race.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 16 (AP). The narrowing down of the Kentucky Derby field favorites was accented today by announcement in Baltimore that Chicstraw, a highly regarded nominee, would not run in the famous race here May 5.

The George E. Widener brown colt, highly regarded for the sixtieth running of the Derby, was held from proper training by unfavorable weather in the East, his trainer, Jack Joyner, said late today. Along with the colt, who won 7 of his 14 starts as a 2-year-old and was quoted at 12 to 1 in the latest winter book odds, his two stablemates, Jack Low and Kawagoe, neither regarded as serious threats, also were declared out.

Dozen Reported "Out."

While none of the thoroughbreds, nominated last February, is officially out until their owners fail to make formal entry the day before the race, Chicstraw and his two stablemates were among nearly a dozen reported "out," including Black Buddy, Dartle, Don Manuel, Hadagal and Essie Wessie.

The field still holds plenty of potential champions, however, topped by Sir Thomas, the winter book favorite, held at the low odds of 6 to 1; Mata Hari, Singing Wood, Riskulus and Cavalcade. Among others regarded at present as likely to be among the dozen or so actually to start are Peace Chance, Dan Sabath, Sergeant Byrne, Roustabout, Baker's Dozen, Bazar, Collateral, Discovery, Soon Over, Spy Hill, Time Clock, Vitamin B, New Deal, Red Wagon, Revere, Blue Again, Jabot and Thomasville. The latter turned in a handy workout over the mile today in 1:42 3-5.

The Temple of Minakshi, or Fish Mother, is one of the finest examples of Dravidian architecture in India. The outer wall surrounds an area of 847 by 729 feet in which are 50 buildings all devoted to some purpose of the temple worship. The wall is of granite, and is 37 feet high.

The four main gateways are cut through pyramidical towers which are 50 to 60 feet across at the base, and which extend 11 stories to a height of 150 feet. All surfaces of these pyramid gateways are covered with hundreds of thousands of intricate carvings of gods and characters of mythology. Elsewhere in the temple buildings and on their columns and outer surfaces are myriads more of these statues —30,000,000 of them in all, according to estimates.

The temple is located in the center of Madura, which is the capital of Madras, British India, and which was once the capital of the Pandyan Kingdom. The temple is believed to have been partly destroyed in the flood of Menu, but was rebuilt in the second or third century. It was damaged again by the Mohammedans in the fourteenth century. Its present splendor is credited to Tirumulla Navak, last of the Rajahs, who ruled from 1622 to 1662.

Horses and other animals spend their entire lives high in the mountains in Hawaii without ever taking a drink of water. They live above the level of running water, and get their necessary moisture from dew-laden grass. These horses do not even know how to drink—given a bucket of water they attempt to bite its contents.

Dear Al: Havre de Grace, April 16.

We all remember The Heathen, which was shining on Maryland tracks about the time we were trying to get Roxey on our catwhisker radios. The old campaigner, now 10 years old, is still mighty sprightly. He showed a flash of his old-time speed at Bowie and off that performance was made the overnight favorite for a sprint here today. He ran today, but not before the afternoon crowd. It seems that his old muscles need working the morning of a race. A stable boy took him out shortly after sunrise. The veteran tossed the boy and then began running. He covered a mile, then another and came to a halt only after making it three. In his younger days he was known as strictly a short-distance horse. After his performance this morning don't be surprised to find him in at a mile and a quarter. I would have been much better off had I stayed in a stable. BILL.

First race—Air Line went to the front in his recent outing at Bowie and then faded. The tightener he received may find him an improved youngster tomorrow. Bred for the mud, this son of Trojan appears to be a good wager. Little Dinah is a fast thing, despite her ordinary race in better company. Rustic Joe, a cheap one, will like the off track.

Second race—Whoa Back strikes me as a fair sort of juvenile. He just missed winning at Bowie behind Up and Up and then ran third to Our Mae. Seems well placed here. Migrate raced keenly down in Prince Georges County. Color Bearer for the show.

Third race—Quickly appeared a little short in recent races. However, I understand this one is primed for a sprint now and will be hard to beat. Acautaw will be at home in the mud. Wilrob, even at 6 furlongs, is dangerous.

Fourth race—Ladino did not run his race at Bowie. The going tomorrow will favor him and I look for this one to defeat Irene's Bob. Haggerson may improve off that last to make a money appearance.

Fifth race—I'm taking Jungle King here. Clocker Mike couldn't explain that poor Bowie race. Perhaps the horse did not like the track. At any rate, I'm going back. A run to his trials will bring us a winner here. Chatmoss is speedy and an off track horse. Larranaga for the show.

Sixth race—Chat Eagle has shown us top form when not placed too high. The conditions should suit in this very open race. May break on top and lead all the way. All Rowes' Florida races were good. Guardian has a little class.

Seventh race—Mr. Hyde has never tried this route but recent sprints have been excellent. Defeated Jack Low, The Triumvir and others. He is not a sound horse but is the class here if he stands up. Parfty and Belle Fille for the other awards.

Alex. High Lists Two District Foes

Alexandria, Va., April 16 (Spl.).—Alexandria High School's powerful ball club has a pair of contests beeked for the next two days. Tomorrow afternoon the Twins and the National Training School will hook up, and on Wednesday Tech is slated to oppose the locals. Both engagements are on foreign territory.

Eddie Hammersely will take the hill against the Training School lads and Jim Titcomb, ace southpaw, will work against Teach. Inthe opening game of the season, Titcomb shut out the Manual Trainers, 8 to 0, allowing them three hits.

Now that Coach Bill Langford has his St. Mary's Celtics clicking, he intends to keep them that way. Daily drills will be held every afternoon this week in preparation for Sunday's battle with the Ballston nine, Lefty McIntire will hurl for the Celtics.

Steinke Stunt May Steal Mat Show

Effort to Toss Two in 45 Minutes Attracting Fans' Interest.

THEY are billing the Jim McMillan-Joe Dusek bout as the feature on Thursday's Auditorium rassle card, but, judging from the talk along the rialto, the stunt of Hans Steinke in volunteering to toss two men in 45 minutes just to show that he is good and entitled to a crack at one of the title claimants, seems to be causing the most tongue-wagging among the cash customers.

Steinke, a strong and scientific matman of the old school, who also has held his own in the present-day brawling style, once was recognized as a world champ. He is not particularly colorful, so the promoters have given him the go-by when booking big matches—and the title claimants have been glad that this is the case.

Takes on Two in Row.

Steinke has been hopping into rings and challenging the headline performers, but without getting a tumble or getting a chance to tumble them. So-o-o, in order to make his claims stronger, he will undertake to toss Jack McArthur and Leo Bacigalupi in rapid order, both in 45 minutes, Thursday night. The idea seems to have struck the popular fancy of the fans.

Joe Dusek went more than an hour with McMillan the last time this pair met. Then he suddenly remembered that, after all, he was a Dusek and became so rough and tough that he was disqualified. This means that a red-hot battle is in the offing when they tangle again Thursday.

Ernie Zeller, the world's champion wiggler, who made quite a hit here two shows back, meets Dr. Len Hall in one of the preliminaries, with the others pitting Mike Romano against Harry Fields and Scotty McDougall against Andy Rascher. Both Fields and Rascher made their local debuts here last week and seemed to be crowd-pleasers.

Didrikson Will Pitch For Bewhiskered Nine

Muscatine, Iowa, April 16 (U.P.). Mildred (Babe) Didrikson, all-around girl athlete, will join the pitching staff of the bewhiskered House of David Baseball Team, Manager Ray L. Doans announced today.

The Babe will report next month to start training, coming here from her home in Beaumont, Tex.

She will receive $1,000 a month, Doans said.

Feature at Texas To Bostonian Gal

3-Year-Old Filly Spread-Eagles Field of Six.

Arlington, Tex., April 16 (AP).—Mrs. J. H. McCoole's 3-year-old filly, Bostonian Gal, ran a smart race today to spread-eagle a field of five other platers in the mile top event at Arlington Downs.

Eddie Litzenberger shot the filly in front at the rise of the barrier, then took her back off the pace, while Bitter Root stepped along in front. Rounding the turn for home, however, Bostonian Gal swept into command and never was seriously menaced as she widened the gap to finish five lengths in front of Bitter Root.

Although backed by none too consistent record, the daughter of Bostonian, which once raced for the Whitney Stables, paid only $7.50 for $2. Bitter Root was the odds-on favorite.

WATERSET, favoring the footing, sprinted into an easy lead, was rated in front when fully in stride and then drew out at will during the final stages. BLUE FOAM, in nearest pursuit of the winner throughout, failed to menace the pacemaker when placed to punishment. TRILLIUM worked his way up steadily, but was unable to threaten the first two. JOLIE FILLE was never able to better her position. MISS GLACE closed gamely after being slow to settle in her stride. GOD OF WAR raced evenly. FRED ALMY would not extend himself in the slippery footing.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:05. Off at 3:05. Winner, Starmount Stable's br. f. CHEROKEE SAL, slow to get going, met with slight interference when attempting to move up on the inside leaving the back stretch, closed stoutly when taken to the outside and came away rapidly approaching the finish after displacing FERVID. Latter, a keen factor from the start, raced CHAIN nd VISHNU into submission, but weakened suddenly after moving clear. MY BOSS, hard ridden and punished in the last half mile, passed tiring horses. CHAIN went strongly for the first half mile, then tired. DISTRIBUTE was unable to menace the leaders. VISHNU stopped badly after being a strong factor until midway o fthe turn.

THIRD RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800. For maiden 2-year-olds, colts and geldings. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:37½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PSYCHIC BID, $40.10, $11.20, $6.90; ARBITRARY, $3.50, $2.90; SYNOD, $5.80.

PSYCHIC BID, a keen factor from the start, made a wide turn into the home stretch, responded willingly to severe pressure and, under strong handling, outstayed ARBITRARY. Latter, in the thick of contention from the beginning, saved much ground to assume a slight lead at the final pole, and then held on gamely. SYNOD raced strongly throughout, but weakened slightly during the fina drive. SUN CAPRICE improved his position strongly on the inside in the final three furlongs. NAUTCH showed a good effort throughout. BARTERING was forced to race wide the entire trip. He colsed with good courase. STEINFORTH finished gamely after racing on the inside.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. The Hampton Roads. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4:07½. Winner, J. W. Martin's blk. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOON GLORY, $38.50, $8.40, $5.60; ROUND TABLE, $3.90, $2.60; BLACK FALCON, $7.30.

MOON GLORY sprinted into a commanding lead soon after the start, saved ground wherever possible and held sway unti lthe finish. ROUND TABLE worked his way up gradually on the outside, lost much ground during the stretch turn, but finished with good courage. BLACK FALCON slipped through on the inside entering the home stretch and finished gamely. NIGHT SPRITE followed in closest pursuit of the winner early, but tired under punishment in the closing drive. RADAMANTHUS, slow to get into racing stride, closed fastest of all in the final stages. GALON LAD lacked early speed. FIRELOCK was always outrun. BE SHY did not fancy the footing and was not persevered with.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. The Harford Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:40. Off at 4:46½. Winner, J. E. SILENT SHOT, in fine form and suited by the footing, moved up with a rush midway o fthe stretch, raced HIGH QUEST down in the closing sixteenth. HIGH QUEST, vigorously ridden to get to the front while on the inside, raced MINEY MYERSON and BONANZA into submission, but faltered inside the closing furlong after his early efforts. PATCHPOCKET, at home in the going, came through on the inside entering the home stretch and held on gamely. CHARACTER could not better his position under strong pressure. CURACAO broke swiftly, but lacked early speed. SPRINGSTEEL did not fancy the going and was outrun. BONANZA tired in the last quarter mile. MINEY MYERSON stopped badly.

Stocks Retreat 1.3 Points in Selling Drive

New York, April 16 (AP).—Retreat was the order of the day in speculative markets.

The signal for selling seemed to have been Speaker Rainey's disclosure that silver legislation was not among the items which the Administration wants passed before Congress adjourns.

There was heavy liquidation of grains and silver futures and, on the stock exchange, a general weakening of prices, particularly metal shares and issues identified with the cereal markets. Share traders did some unloading that brought extreme declines of 1 to 5 points.

Among Larger Losses.

The larger losses for equities were to be found in volatile issues, Case, United States Smelting and Armour of Illinois preferred losing 4 to 5 at the worst, while the general run of favorites suffered less severely. Selling was active for half an hour, but by closing time the market had quieted down and there was some recovery from the lows. Transactions aggregated 1,306,880 shares.

With the news assuming an anti-inflation aspect at a time when some quarters had been looking for the opposite, market responses were rather in line with precedent. Grains have been harboring large long positions, especially in the May delivery, which were built up months ago in expectation of higher prices that did not materialize.

The life of that contract has not long to run, and it has recently encountered liquidation. Today's selling found buyers scarce; it was the first time since October that all grains broke the limit.

On List of Losers.

Net losses for U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Westinghouse, General Electric, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Consolidated Gas, New York Central, Pennsylvania and Santa Fe ranged from fractions to slightly more than a point, but American Can, Du Pont, American Smelting and Auburn were heavier. The last named stock, in fact, was weak all day.

Union Pacific was higher in the morning and did not sell during the reaction. Schulte Stores preferred had a runup and U. S. Rubber was fairly firm. Several recently popular preferred stocks reacted.

Meanwhile, news bearing on business conditions was reasonably palatable. American Telephone's first quarter earnings, though well below present dividend requirements, nevertheless represented improvement over a year ago and President Gifford reported a reversal in the trend of installations.

Auto Labor Status.

The automobile labor situation seemed more peaceful and early car loadings figures for last week showed a pickup.

Steel operations have again crossed 50 per cent of capacity, the Iron & Steel Institute estimating current as 50.3 per cent, a rise of 2.9 points since last Monday. The high for the 1933 boom was just short of 60 per cent and the present level is the best since August when activity was waning. The magazine Steel says the manufacturers "see ahead a period of steadily mounting operations."

The stock exchange bill in its Senate version, Wall street heard, will soon be discussed with President Roosevelt. It is one of the measures on which the Administration wants action, and many in the financial community will be glad when it is out of the way.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Bankhead Cotton Control Bill Involves Impossible Task of Enforcement; Will End in Wholesale "Bootlegging" or Another Farm Board.

By Ralph West Robey.

Acceptance by the Senate of the conference report on the Bankhead cotton-control bill means presumably that this measure is over its last difficult hurdle. Favorable action by the House, according to Washington opinion, is almost a certainty. And since it is an Administration measure, there is little reason to doubt that the President will add his signature. During the legislative history of the bill there have been some changes made, but basically the measure as it has come out of conference is the same as when it was introduced with a White House blessing some weeks ago.

The bill limits cotton production during the current year to 10,000,000 bales. There are no exemptions—the six-bale exemption for each grower that had been inserted in the Senate bill having been deleted in the conference. This total production is distributed among the various States according to the average production for the last five years. Within each State the quota is assigned to each farmer on the basis of the production of his land as shown by ginning records. Before one can sell more than his quota he must pay a tax equal to 50 per cent of the market price, but never less than 5 cents a pound. It is assumed, of course, that this tax will be prohibitive and will limit production to 10,000,000 bales.

Termed Most Revolutionary Of New Deal Legislation.

The bill has been termed the most revolutionary measure of the New Deal. It seems to me that this is not an exaggeration. By it we propose to have the Government tell every cotton raiser in the country just how many bales he may sell. There are about 2,000,000 such producers. It is little short of fantastic to think that the Government is, or can be, prepared to undertake such a policing job as will be involved in enforcing the Bankhead bill.

This, however, is only a relatively unimportant phase of the problem. The significant aspect of the bill is the proof it provides of the willingness of this administration to attempt to regiment our economic activity. Obviously it considers no task too great, and no detail too small, to be included in its "planned society." When an administration is willing to undertake to tell every farmer what he can and can not raise on each acre of his ground, it is useless, it seems to me, any longer to talk about our living in a free society.

Is Emphasized South Desires Such Control.

The answer that is made to such a line of criticism is that the measure is desired by the South. This, we are told, definitely takes it out of the field of Fascism, removes all taint of regimentation and "revolution" and makes it simply a voluntary cooperative plan for bringing about a reduction of cotton production.

Such a statement, it should not be necessary to say, is nonsense. It is true that a group claiming to represent cotton growers came to Washington and asked for such legislation, but this does not make the measure a voluntary crop-reduction plan. Ample proof of this, I dare say, will be provided in due time by those farmers whose crop exceeds their quota. They will show us that the voluntary part is limited to a desire to get a higher price for their product, and that this higher price is desired not for a rigidly predetermined amount, such as this bill provides, but for all they have produced.

Of course, if there happens to be a mere handful of farmers with a crop above their quota—and this will depend primarily upon the weather—it is possible that the Government can ignore their complaints. If the number is large, however, some "relief" will become politically necessary. Either this or the whole plan will break down because of extensive "bootlegging" of surpluses.

If "relief" is granted, it probably will take the form of Government loans on the surplus. How much this would cost is an open question, but quite obviously it might run to an enormous amount—and every dollar advanced in this way would be thrown away just as surely as was the money used by the old Farm Board.

Bond Market Reacts Under Profit Taking

Decline Is First Since March 27; Turnover, $17,037,000.

New York April 16 (AP).—April profit-taking showers dampened the bond market today and the average for 60 domestic corporate issues off, two-tenths of a point, registered its first decline since March 27, last.

While losses of around a point or more were confined principally to the secondary groups a few prime investment loans were a bit easier.

Trading activity was not especially pronounced, however, and transfers totaled only $17,037,000, par value, compared with $16,074,000 last Friday.

Rails Turn Heavy.

The rails were a little the heaviest of the various categories. Among the more active losers here were some liens of Alleghany Corporation, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, International Great Northern, Missouri Pacific, N. Y. Central and Wabash.

Several bonds of Santa Fe, Illinois Central, Morris & Essex, New Haven and Norfolk & Western more than held their own. Illinois Central collateral 4s of 1952 and 1953 advanced 1¼ and 5¾ points, respectively. Detroit & Mackinac 4s dropped 24⅞ points on a single sale of 7 bonds.

Utility and industrial declines included some issues of American & Foreign Power, American Water Works, Bethlehem Steel, International Telephone, Paramount, Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron, Postal Telegraph and Warner Bros. Loans of Walworth, Vanadium, U. S. Rubber and North American Edison were steady to firm.

U. S. Loan Turnover.

There was a turnover of some $3,800,000 in the U. S. Government section and declines of 1-32d to 13-32ds of a point predominated.

The new Treasury conversion 3¼s made their appearance on the listed market for the first time. They were fairly active, closing at 101.19. They were high at 101.25 and low at 101.16.

Foreign obligations were somewhat irregular. German government 5½s lost 2⅛ and the 7s were off 2⅞ points. Bonds of France, Argentina, Japan, Cordoba, Silesia and Sao Paulo were firm.

Selling Flurry Pushes Curb Prices Down

Utilities, Oils, Alcohols Decline; Trading Falls to 262,000 Shares.

New York, April 16 (AP).—A selling flurry at the beginning of the last hour caused curb prices to close lower today. Trading was active for about 30 minutes and dealings dwindled on a mild recovery that followed.

Some specialties were higher in the forenoon, but most gains were lost in the late sag.

Utilities, oils, alcohols and metals showed recessions of fractions to around 2 points.

Aluminum Co. of America dropped 5 on small offerings. Schiff Co., Newmont, Waco Aircraft, Parker Rust-Proof, American Gas & Electric and Electric Bond & Share preferred finished down 1 to around 2. Lesser declines were shown by Electric Bond & Share common, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Swift & Co., Standard Oil of Indiana and Humble Oil. Sherwin Williams was an isolated firm spot, ending a point higher.

A. T. & T. Net Rises in '34 to $33,038,108

DuPont de Nemours Co. Earns 90 Cents on Common.

New York, April 16 (AP).—American Telephone & Telegraph Co. today reported net income of $33,038,108 for the first quarter of 1934 compared with $32,383,187 in the corresponding period of last year.

Walter S. Gifford, president, in a statement to stockholders, said that during the recent quarter the Bell System had a net gain of 108,000 telephones. This compared with a net increase of 32,000 in the preceding quarter and net loss of 340,000 in the first three months of 1933. Each month since last August has shown a gain, he said.

Wilmington, Del., April 16 (AP).—The E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. report for the quarter ended March 31, shows the company earned 90 cents a share on its common stock, compared with $1.02 in the fourth quarter last year and 35 cents in the first quarter in 1933.

The foregoing figures include dividends from the company's General Motors investment, equivalent to 22½ per cent on each Du Pont share for the quarter ended March 31; 45 cents for the fourth quarter last year, and 23 cents for the first quarter in 1933.

All figures include the company's equity profits or losses of controled companies not consolidated.

New York, April 16 (AP).—A sharp decline in net profits for 1933 is reported by the Standard Oil Co. of California.

The company disclosed a net of $7,560,902 for the year, after an allowance of $17,443,177 for depreciation, depletion, amortization and provision for contingencies including taxes, equivalent to 58 cents a share. This is comparable with a net profit of $14,014,992, or $1.07 a share in 1932. The total allowance amounted to $17,342,000.

Net earnings of International Business Machines Co. for the first quarter amounted to $1,688,849, after reserves, depreciation and estimated Federal taxes, equal to $2.40 a share on 703,345 shares no-par capital stock outstanding. This compares with $1,502,206 or $2.13 in same quarter last year.

Federated Department Stores report net profit in the fiscal year ended January 31, 1934, of $1,443,790 after expenses, depreciation, taxes, interest, preferred dividends and minority interest equal to $1.58 a common share. This compares with net profit of $564,056 in the previous fiscal year, equal to 62 cents a common share.

Windsor, Ont., April 16 (AP).—The annual report of the Ford Motor Co., of Canada, Ltd., issued to stockholders today, showed net loss in 1933 of $620,700.

Chicago, April 15 (AP).—Gross earnings of the Michigan Gas and Electric Co., subsidiary of Middle West Utilities, for 1933 today were reported at $1,132,219, a decline of 5.4 per cent over 1932, and net income was given as $47,251, against $164,148 the previous year.

Remedies Urged as Safeguards In Private and U. S. Borrowing

By Anna P. Youngman.

During the first three months of the year, new capital issues, exclusive of Federal financing, amounted to $224,997,754, according to compilations of the Commercial and Financial Chronicle.

This total compares favorably with the $100,674,668 of new issues reported for the corresponding period in 1933, but the increase is due almost entirely to larger municipal offerings which were heavily concentrated in the month of March. In spite of this improvement, the volume of new issues was not much more than half the figure reported for the first quarter of 1932, less than one-fifth the amount of 1931 offerings and slightly more than one-tenth of the total for the same period in 1930.

Corporate issues alone amounted to only $32,811,285 for the first quarter, an increase of $6,200,000 over a year ago, but a sharp contrast to the $1,728,545,919 of new corporate issues floated during the first three months of 1930. Although the showing for last month is better than that for February, corporate issues still remained at the extraordinarily low level of $13,770,378.

Contrast Between Federal And Private Borrowing.

The activity prevailing in the market for Federal issues stands in sharp contrast to the stagnant condition of the market for private investment issues. During January and February, the Government added $2,200,300,500 to its outstanding indebtedness, and including refunding issues, its total offerings reached $3,733,201,500.

This summary indicates that two things are needed to clear the way for a reopening of the private capital market. Not only is modification of the securities act essential, but the Government must undertake to withdraw from financing activities that entail a steady encroachment upon investment fields formerly reserved to private enterprise. It must also moderate spending operations that give rise to new borrowing on a large scale which leads to undesirable absorption of private savings and bank credit. To a large extent it is true that with the removal of legal obstacles to a normal revival of private investment the Government would receive fewer requests for emergency capital advances due to the lack of customary accommodation from private sources. But while financing of this temporary substitute type would recede, another sort of Government borrowing threatens to offer continuing interference with private investment activities. Every day brings reports, for instance, of contemplated raids on the Treasury which, if carried out, would result in large additions to the public debt or resort to inflationary expedients that would even more effectually nip in the bud a revival of private investment.

Dangerous Possibilities In McLeod Depositors' Bill.

The McLeod plan, for instance, to pay depositors in closed banks in full would in its several versions according to varying estimates, cost from $1,500,000,000 to $2,500,000,000. But the dangerous possibilities of the measure are not limited to the direct costs. Restitution to depositors of failed banks is being urged on the specious ground that the Government is morally obligated to reimburse those who put their trust in banks regulated by Federal laws. Since latest plans would include State and private banks, too, the moral obligation is now conceived to grow out of the fact that depositors were urged officially not to hoard their funds and paid penalty for their patriotic response to such admonitions.

It hardly seems necessary to point to the obvious difference between Government loans used to prevent collapse of banks and financial institutions during an emergency which threatened the entire economic and financial structure of the country, and debts incurred for the purpose of reimbursing a small percentage of the population for losses suffered over a period of years. The latter type of loan is plainly contracted for the purpose of paying a subsidy and it is of a character to encourage a succession of similar abuses. Proposals to advance Government funds to industries that can not qualify as safe borrowers, plans to refinance farm mortgages at abnormally low rates of interest, efforts to subsidize silver interests, &c., would lead either to dangerous credit inflation or to outright currency inflation. In either case, the result would be further Government enroachments upon National income. Private capital needs a free field for future expansion, and that calls for a cessation of deficit financiering and speedy withdrawal of the Government from financing activties forced upon it during a period of emergency.

Wool Market.

Boston, April 16 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—Several of the larger holders of domestic wool in Boston refused to accept bids as low as prices on the recent extremely small turnover. Demand, however, continued very limited and supplies were available to fill the demand at the prevailing prices of last week.

Estimated receipts of domestic wool at Boston, reported to the Boston Grain and Flour Exchange during the week ended April 14, amounted to 152,800 pounds, compared with 325,500 during the previous week.

Stock Trading

Cotton Prices Drop $1 Under Liquidation

May Closes at 11.63 as General Markets Falls 22 to 28 Points.

New York, April 16 (AP).—A decline of slightly more than $1 a bale in cotton today carried the market down to the lowest levels since early February. There was active general liquidation influenced by weakness of grains and silver. July sold off from 11.95 to 11.73 and closed at 11.75, with the general market finishing barely steady at net declines of 22 to 28 points.

The opening was 2 to 5 points lower. Liverpool was a fair seller here on narrower differences during the first hour, but the market showed a fair resistance to each point decline on scale down price fixing for domestics and foreign trade account.

Reports that the Senate had adopted the conference report on the Bankhead bill Saturday afternoon and that early House approval of the measure was considered probable were without apparent market influence as traders turned their attention to other developments.

Becomes More Active.

Following a moderate turnover during the morning at slowly sagging prices, the market became more active and easier in the mid-afternoon under rather general liquidation with the lower levels uncovering stop orders.

Locals were active sellers on the decline and offerings also came from Wall Street and wire houses. May eased from 11.84 to 11.62 and October from 12.08 to 11.86 with final prices at or within a few points of the lowest.

Washington advices indicating that silver legislation was not on the Administration's program for this session of Congress came in for attention in connection with the weakness of silver and the apparent lessening possibilities for inflationary legislation of this character.

Exports today, 16,477, making 6,343,690 so far this season. Port receipts, 11,355. U. S. port stocks, 3,067,429.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was easy today, closing 5 to 16 points net lower under increased liquidation and commission house selling, promoted by the weakness of grains and the lower lard and cotton markets.

Weakness of the stock market was a factor. Sales 56 contracts, bleach-spot nominal; May closed 5.22; July, 5.42; September, 5.62; October, 5.67.

Steel Operation Rises 3 Points To 51 Per Cent

Specifications in Heavy Contracts Increase Mills' Activity.

Cleveland, April 16.—Responding briskly to an inflow of April specifications on heavy contracts placed before price advances go in effect this week, steel works operations last week rose 3 points to 51 per cent, states the magazine Steel.

Sharp gains were made in the major producing districts, with Pittsburgh up 3 points to 39 per cent; eastern Pennsylvania, 3½ to 38½; Youngstown, 2 to 57, and Chicago, 1½ to 50. Wheeling was up 7 points to 69; Cleveland, 2 to 69. Birmingham remained at 52; Buffalo, 50, while Detroit was down 6 points to 82, and New England 4 to 78. Youngstown operations this week are scheduled at 59 per cent, and Pittsburgh at 40.

Steelmakers see ahead a period of steadily mounting operations. Some stopped taking contracts last week, several days prior to the effective dates for new prices, fearing a shortage of skilled labor before July. Automotive, railroad and miscellaneous demands continue strongly upward.

In summary, recent events in the steel industry mean: By giving 10 days' notice of price increases and throwing wide open their order books, steelmakers have sacrificed no less than $25,000,000.

This is based on finished steel output with the industry operating around 50 per cent, and the difference between Steel's composites of the old and new finished steel prices.

As an offset to this, the industry has built up tonnage by giving consumers the opportunity to cover their requirements three to four months ahead, meantime to make their own adjustments. The industry has not antagonized the Government, because finished steel prices even at the new level still are $4.98 a ton below the 1926 average—the President's mark for commodities. And labor benefits through the return to the 1929 wage standard April 1—three months ahead of the time when steelmakers gain, except through increased tonnage.

Blanket All Iron and Steel.

Price advances applying this week, or immediately in view, practically blanket all iron and steel products.

In addition to the increases announced in Steel last week, stock tin plate is up $7 a ton, structural rivets $5, sheet piling $3. Light rails are up $3 a ton, and an increase is expected in the $36.37½ price on standard rails, quoted to the Government last fall, and which expired April 15.

A rise of $7 a ton is expected shortly on tubular products, and $10 on electrical sheets. While some producers raised wire $3 effective April 16, one large manufacturer filed an increase of only $2, effective April 19.

Cost 25 Per Cent Higher.

Lake Superior iron ore producers have quoted last year's prices on an inquiry for 50,000 tons from the Ford Motor Co. With a 10 per cent wage increase for Great Lakes seamen, larger crews and higher coal prices, transportation costs this year will be up 25 per cent. A miner's strike in Alabama is reducing coal output, and by-product coke there has been raised 50 cents a ton. Scrap prices are unchanged following recent heavy buying.

Most of the Western railroads have now placed contracts for their major rail requirements, the Great Northern distributing 20,000 tons. New York Central has contracted for 10,500 tons of miscellaneous steel products for second quarter; Norfolk & Western, 4,500 tons.

Pere Marquette has purchased 1,600 tons of rails and fastenings. New York, New Haven & Hartford is expected to inquire shortly for 25,000 tons of rails and 10,000 tons of accessories.

Awards Total 12,427 Tons.

Structural shape awards for the week, 12,427 tons, compared with 6,021 in the preceding week. Price protections for 60 days on specific jobs have brought out many new projects. The Solvay Process Corporation is taking bids for a plant at Baton Rouge, La., requiring 5,000 tons.

Steel's London correspondent tables daily average pig iron output in Great Britain in March rose 13.4 per cent over February; steel, 9.4 per cent.

With the new finished steel prices now in effect or about to become effective early this week, Steel's finished steel composite is up $3.80 to $54.90; the iron and steel composite is up $2.37 to $34.77, while the scrap idex holds at $12.21.

Commentators Have a Chance To 'Air Peeves

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Nelson Bell.

The motion picture critics of the country are about to have their annual field day.

Mr. Jack Alicoate, former member of the staff of this thriving family journal and now editor and publisher of Film Daily, the trade publication under whose auspices the critics each twelvemonth nominate the "Ten Best Pictures of the Year," in a characteristically peppy and provocative note to the dramatic desks apprises them of the imminence of that safety valve of editorial repression known at "The Critics' Forum."

"Please speak freely," urges Mr. Alicoate, "as that is the way these forums will do the most good. If you do not wish to be quoted on any subject, just say so and we will respect your wishes.

As in the case of the previous forum, the material will be run serially in the Film Daily and later assembled into a complete analytical article for simultaneous release by all participating critics."

Blueprint of a Headache.

To facilitate the orderly regimentation of the critical thought of the Nation, Mr. Alicoate, on the reverse side of his letter, sends along a questionnaire encompassing 10 major items of inquiry. They constitute the ground work of a sizable headache.

For example, "Which is the more important—star value or story value?" "How would you rate the morals of the screen today with those of the stage and current literature, as well as with everyday life?" "Rate in order the type of short subjects preferred in your city." "In your opinion, what brings patronage to the box-office—admission price, quantity of entertainment, double features, type of picture or star?"

Quite naturally, having given an eye to the cinema practically from the time of its inception, I have my own pretty fixed notions with regard to questions 1, 2 and 4 in the paragraph above.

Opportunity for Public.

In the matter of the one which is not a question, but a bit in the mandatory style, "Rate in order the type of short subject preferred in your city," it seems to me that the public should be given an opportunity to express its own preference. This column will be happy to communicate to Mr. Alicoate and his forum any expressions as to short subjects that are preferred by the picturegoers of Washington.

If there is any specific type of short subject that you particularly enjoy, or, inversely, any that you especially dislike, drop a line to this department and we will make your predilections and antipathies known to the industry.

These are not the items, however, that represent the "safety valve of editorial repression" in the truest sense. They come along in Nos. 8, 9 and 10, to wit: "How can theaters, in general, improve their service to their patrons?" "What are your pet motion picture likes? Dislikes?" and that priceless No. 10, "Squawk Department!"

Vox Populi Again.

I won't need any help on Nos. 9 and 10, but it seems to me that the public at large might have a few ideas of its own regarding No. 8. That is the one that reads, "How can theaters, in general, improve their service to their patrons?"

We will be glad to hear our old friend, Vox Populi, on this one, too.

Only please omit all suggestions relating to chewing gum on the seats and the ushers' inspired perverseness in unfailingly showing you to every other seat in the house than the one you want. We've already thought of those.

Our surmise that Sidney Lust, one of the Capital's foremost independent motion picture exhibitors and veteran film men, eventually would reach Los Angeles in time to attend the annual convention of the M. P. T. O. A., proved correct. Another postcard from him—this one legible—postmarked Los Angeles, April 9, is both a confession and a confidence:

"I never knew our industry was so big. They are doing things in a big way out here." Yeah, some of us were already beginning to have our suspicions about that last!

Another British Threat.

Pursuant to the thought expressed here that "The Private Life of Henry VIII" and "Catherine the Great" afford tangible evidence that British-made pictures must be deemed a definite threat to Hollywood's undisputed supremacy, the brochure distributed by the Will H. Hays office to announce "Selected Motion Pictures" for the month of April, rates first among three pictures chosen as "Best of the Month," another English release made by British-Gaumont and distributed in this country by Fox.

This is "The Constant Nymph," adapted from the novel by Margaret Kennedy, with music by the London Symphony Orchestra. It was directed by Basil Dean and has in the cast such artists as Brian Aherne, whose American film adventures were not overwhelmingly successful, although his appearance opposite Katharine Cornell, on the stage, in "The Barrets of Wimpole Street," assuredly was; Victoria Hopper, Peggy Blythe, Jane Baxter and Lyn Harding.

The reviewing groups spanning the continent which report through Mr. Hays' office have this to say concerning the picture: "Another English production which can be recommended for its scintillating direction, its exceptionally fine cast, its fascinating story, which adheres closely to the original and which is appealing in its beautiful and sensitive treatment, its exquisite musical accompaniment and outstanding photography."

Hollywood's Two.

The other two included among the best of the month are "The House of Rothschild," starring George Arliss, supported by Boris Karloff, Loretta Young, C. Aubrey Smith, Reginald Owen and Alan Mowbray, a United Artists release, and Paramount's "Melody in Spring," with Lanny Ross, Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland and Ann Sothern heading the cast.

"The House of Rothschild" is characterized as "One of the year's finest"—as well it might be—and "Melody in Spring," described as "A rollicking musical comedy, in which there are delightful singing, good cast, efficient direction and amusing story."

Two pictures current on F street the April report relegates enthusiastically to the limbo of negation.

On Thursday of this week at 8 p. m., the National Press Club, through the courtesy of the Rialto Theater and Carl Laemmle, will be favored with an advance showing of "I'll Tell the World," a Universal production dealing with the newspaper game and starring Lee Tracy, recently summarily dismissed from the M-G-M lot for allegedly unseemly conduct below the Rio Grande during the filming of "Viva Villa." It is said that more than 100,000 letters reached Hollywood, protesting Mr. Tracy's banishment, which, happily, seems not to have been made to stick.

The Nomadic Novarro.

Ramon Novarro, one of the Capital's most feted late-winter visitors, having discharged all of his contract obligations in Hollywood with the completion of his latest film, "Laughing Boy," at last is embarked upon the concert tour that will take him over much of South America and Europe.

The film star sailed from New York recently on the S. S. Northern Prince, bound for Buenos Aires. After completing a series of recitals scheduled for the ensuing three months, he will go on to England to spend the summer.

Under his present motion picture agreements, Novarro is at liberty to spend six months every year away from the studios. Last season he gave a number of eminently successful concerts in London, Paris, Biarritz and other continental cities.

Prof. Phil Lampkin, the bounding baton-wielder presiding over the orchestra at Loew's Fox Theater, has taken up a new avocation. He has gone in for public speaking in the grand manner and seems destined more or less to harangue his way to the heights of oratorical eminence.

About a month ago he was asked to address a feminine school group at George Washington University—which he did with such success upon the topics of "The Classics vs. Jazz," that a week later he found himself again pounding the speaker's table before the Samuel Gompers Lodge of Masons on the subject of "The Modern Theater."

On Wednesday, Prof. Lampkin will face members of the American University's Girls Glee Club in defense of the thesis that "There Is No Jazz."

Pie for the P. A.

What a chance for Jimmy Durante's press agent! When they get back to Hollyood he probably will point out that just as soon as Jimmy left Washington we had to call in the Japanese Cherry Blossom Festival, the D. A. R. and the opening of the baseball season to take his place!

While he was here, his popularity, as you might say, was at its beak!

Gayety

"MADCAP REVUE." Hirst-Lake production, starring Bozo Snyder and Fritzie Bey, with Gertrude Hayes, jr., Ruby Lang, Buster Phillips, Delores Shaw, Rita Zehn, Joe Forte, Lew Petel, Clyde Bates and Jack Hunt, Harry Allen and the Parks Trio. Staged by Frank Bryant. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Mr. Thomas Snyder is back again.

In case you do not recognize the personality beneath the unaccustomed dignity of nomenclature, know then that the aforementioned Mr. Thomas Snyder is that inimitable master of pantomimic comedy, "Bozo."

Here is a case where a reviewer might well emulate the eminent Mr. Snyder by leaving enough blank space for the reader to fill in his own list of superlatives. The burlesque stage has nothing else like him, and he is so superior a mime that any effort to describe the man and his work must pale in comparison with the real thing.

Three sketches are programmed: A repeat of the "Trombone Scene" of his recent earlier performance, and revivals of his famed "Paper Hanger" and "Theater" scenes, assisted in the latter by the entire company. It is fully as much as Joe Forte, the straight man and sole reader of lines, as to "Bozo" himself that the effectiveness of the several scenes is due.

The work of "Bozo," of course, is what carries the punch of the scenes, but Forte brings a thorough understanding of comedy values to the acts that places him along with Buddy Abbott, among the ace straights.

Closely following are Clyde Bates and Jack Hunt, tramp comics, earlier selected by Clark and McCullough to carry on the burlesque work of those stage and screen favorites. Their best work is done in the "family affair" scene, assisted by Lew Petel and DeLores Shaw, singer and general utility woman.

While "Madcap Revue" is just that in the large, it is, nevertheless, a burlesque show with plenty of distaff distractors, too. Heading the list is Fritzie Bey, who brought her fans and violin on from the Century of Progress and gives the boys in the stalls value received.

Buster Phillips—Fritzie's sister, unless we have been misinformed—gives La Bey a close run for terpsichorean torridity and audience reaction. For that matter, there is nothing wrong with Rita Zehn when it comes to the dazzling endowments of the display of artiste.

Among the others participating in the festivities are Harry Allen and Ruby Lang, soloists; Gertrude Hayes, jr., who makes herself generally useful throughout the performance, and the Parks Trio, a group of boys who made good singing cowboy songs at last Friday's amateur night.

G. M. Car Exports Gain 79 Per Cent

New York, April 16.—General Motors sales abroad of car and truck units, from all sources, for the first quarter of 1934 totaled 39,616 units, an increase of 79 per cent over the total for the corresponding period of 1933, and an increase of 83 per cent over the total for the first quarter of 1932.

The March results, reflecting a continuation of the vigorous upward trend which has been in evidence since the spring of 1933, were at the highest level of any month since May, 1930. The total of 18,106 units was 88 per cent greater than the total in March, 1933, and 123 per cent greater than the total in March, 1932.

These gains are world-wide in extent, and apply not only to the corporation's products manufactured in the United States and Canada, but also to the Opel product manufactured in Germany, and the Vauxhall product manufactured in England.

German U. S. Steel Offering Payment

New York, April 16.—United Steel Works Corporation of Germany announces today that it is now prepared to pay the principal of Gelsenkirchen Mining Corporation six-year 6 per cent secured notes held by nonresidents of Germany in "blocked" Reichsmarks—the only medium of payment for which it has been able to obtain permission from German authorities.

The notes matured on March 1 and at that time the company announced that it was unabe, because of existing foreign exchange restrictions, to pay off the notes in dollars.

Of the $15,000,000 principal amount of notes originally issued, $1,500,000 have been canceled, $9,321,000 have been surrendered in exchange for other securities and cash pursuant to offers made in Europe, and holders of $1,786,500 have agreed to extend their notes for three years, leaving $2,392,500 outstanding in the original form.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, April 16 (AP).—Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway's freight traffic last week totaled 22,731 cars, compared with 21,452 the week before and 21,159 a year ago.

Rollin A. Wilbur has been elected managing director of the investment bankers' code committee. He will maintain offices in New York.

The Navy Department has awarded to American Rolling Mill Co. a $175,000 contract for 400,000 pounds of stainless steel sheets which will be manufactured in the company's plants at Middleton, Ohio, and Butler, Pa.

March bookings of orders for fabricated steel were the largest in volume of any month this year, reports the American Institute of Steel Construction, Inc., on the basis of preliminary reports received from 66 per cent of the industry. The total was 5 per cent above a year ago and 18 per cent larger than the monthly average for the final quarter of 1933.

First National Store, Inc., reports that sales for the five weeks ended March 31 totaled $10,596,518, an increase of 13.3 per cent over a year ago.

Chesapeake & Ohio's freight loadings last week totaled 28,146 cars against 23,649 the previous week and 22,995 a year ago.

A $5,000,000 City of Seattle issue of Municipal Light and Power bonds has been bought from the city by a banking group comprising Bancamerica-Blair Corporation, Central Republic Co. of Chicago and Drumheller, Erichman & White of Seattle. It is understood the issue will be marketed soon. This financing will enable Seattle to complete the final units of its Skagit River hydroelectric development.

March Cotton Exports Hit By Seasonal Cut

Exports of raw cotton from the United States during March amounted to 550,000 bales, valued at $34,219,000, compared with 628,000 bales, valued at $37,280,000 in February and 488,000 bales, valued at $17,957,000 in March, 1933, according to an analysis of the export figures by the Textile Division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

The March figures show a decline of 78,000 bales from the February total which is seasonal. The decline in value was $3,061,000 from the value in February. On the other hand, the March figures showed an increase of 62,000 bales and $16,262,000 over the exports during March, 1933.

For the eight months of the cotton season, August to March, inclusive, the shipments aggregated 6,098,000 bales, valued at $331,831,000, compared with 6,085,000 bales, valued at $234,715,000, for the corresponding eight months of 1932-33, representing a slight increase of 13,000 bales in quantity but a substantial increase of $97,116,000, or 41 per cent, in value.

Chemical Trade Attracts New Japanese Capital

As a result of the favorable returns obtained from investments in the Japanese chemical industry, that industry is attracting more new Capital than any other local industrial activity, according to Assistant Trade Commissioner Donald W. Smith, Tokyo, in a report to the Commerce Department.

According to the published reports of the Bank of Japan, during the first two mnths of the current year, plans were announced for the incorporation of six new chemical companies, involving a total of 30,000,000 yen in new capital, while two established concerns announced their intention of increasing their capital by 4,000,000 yen to enlarge plant capacities.

Dollar Sales Of Autos Rise 22 Per Cent

The annual dollar sales of new passenger automobiles declined 75 per cent from 1929 to 1932, and recovered by 22 per cent during the year 1933, according to the new monthly index of automobile sales appearing in the April issue of the "Survey of Current Business," published by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

The trend of sales was sharply downward from 1929 through 1932 and the first four months of 1933, but the greatest drop occurred between 1931 and 1932, when sales decreased 43.5 per cent. The decrease between 1929 and 1930 was 35.5 per cent and between 1930 and 1931 was 32.5 per cent.

The largest months' sales shown by the index, which is based on the 1929-31 average as 100, occurred during the peak season of 1929 when the index numbers were 168.8 for March, 232.7 for April, and 205.0 for May. Even after allowance is made for usual seasonal fluctuations the same three months of 1929 are still the largest, with adjusted index numbers of 153.5, 154.5, and 146.0, respectively. The lowest index numbers recorded are 17.3 for December, 1933; 22.3 for October, 1932; 17.6 for November, 1932, and 19.3 for December, 1932. But on a seasonally corrected basis October and November of 1932 become the lowest months, at approximately equal level, with adjusted index numbers of 28.0 and 28.5, respectively.

South African Blast Furnace Blown In

The "blowing in" of the large blast furnaces at Pretoria recently was preliminary to the production of the first steel which is expected from the State-aided South African Iron & Steel Corporation shortly, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Trade Commissioner E. B. Lawson, Johannesburg.

The works, Lawson states, are now almost in full operation, since the blast furnaces are lighted and coke ovens have been in use for several weeks. Large supplies of coke are already on hand. It is anticipated that the first steel manufactured by the iron and steel corporation will pass through the rolling mills in from four to six weeks.

There was no official ceremony when the blast furnaces were "blown in," the report states. It was regarded merely as another step in the process of bringing the works to the final production stage.

Mexico Expands Trade With Central America

Organized efforts are being made in Mexico to develop the export trade of that country with the Central American Republics, according to Assistant Commercial Attache R. G. Glover, Mexico City, in a report to the Commerce Department Glover points out that Mexico is rapidly becoming self-sufficient in the production of most of its requirements, with the exception of machinery and motor vehicles.

Recently a delegation of Mexican business men made a tour of the Central American countries with the purpose of developing that market for Mexican manufactured goods. The visit is reported to have been a pronounced success and it is said that a million pesos worth of Mexican goods were marketed. Among the principal items included in this business were matches, glass, jute sacks, leather and bathing suits.

Test of Time

When Grover Cleveland sat in state, and tried to keep the records straight, and governed with an iron hand affairs in this, our native land, a half-baked panic came along, and everything he did was wrong. He was abused by all the gents who had been stuck for 50 cents, he was abused by plutocrats who'd had to pawn their Sunday hats, he was abused by toilers sore, who'd lost their jobs, and walked the floor. Few people had a word of praise for Grover in those dismal days; and when he left the White House chair the people still were prone to swear, and say he'd gummed up all the works, and left the motor full of jerks. The years went by and sage and seer considered Grover's strange career, and weighed his motives and his deeds, and published divers books and screeds, proclaiming him a statesman wise, a statesman of heroic size. The years still roll, and each one finds new books produced by master minds, in which his merits are disclosed, in which detractors are exposed. And now his memory's revered, the man is praised who once was jeered. Is some man shoddy or sublime? We leave it all to Father Time, and he'll decide in proper place, and sift the noble from the base.
